OUR FRIENDS across the Canadian border in Ontario decide that plain water isn't as good as was supposed, and go back to beer with 4.4 of alcohol.

Three questions interest Americans, especially those near the Canadian border:

First, will the sale of mild beer increase drunkenness?

Second, will it cut down whiskey sales and thus diminish drunkenness?

Third, HOW can Americans get some of the beer?

SINCE WE CANNOT make experiments here, being wedded to "absolute prohibition," in other words, to bootleg whiskey, it will be at least interesting to watch the experiment of our Canadian friends.

WHAT IS KNOWN as "the monkey law trial" is based on Tennessee law, which says you mustn't teach the Darwinian theory of evolution. A teacher in Tennessee, harboring the preposterous idea that young Americans have the right to form their own opinions, will be put on trial.

William Jennings Bryan, who made several excursions into the 16 to 1 realm of theory, will be the prosecuting attorney.

IT WILL be a trial as amusing as anything you would see in a real monkey cage. And the funny part will NOT be the young teacher who thinks that young Americans should be trusted to think for themselves.

IT WOULD amuse old Darwin if he could come back, especially as he never said that men descended from monkeys, but merely pointed out facts and left men to do their own thinking. He didn't realize how much he was asking of 90 per cent. of the population.

YESTERDAY was a nervous time for sixteen high-spirited Americans in London, presented to genuine royalty, at the first Buckingham court reception.

You can imagine how those proud Americans shivered and shook, as they practiced not falling over their long trains or over their shoe buckles! Can you imagine how bored the genuine royalties were?

THE FATHER of King George, when Prince of Wales, met one American that wasn't nervous about royalty. That American was John L. Sullivan, who met the Prince with this reporter looking on.

"Pleased to meet yer; often heard of yer," said Sullivan, doing his best to make the Prince feel at ease.

THIS IS TO BE a great automobile year. April produced 420,873 cars. May is expected to go 20,000 higher.

The automobile industry is now the greatest in the United States, totaling more than $3,163,000,000. The steel industry comes second, about $100,000,000 behind the automobile. Third comes the business of slaughtering and selling animals, more than $500,000,000 behind steel. We have reached the age of billions, our first ten industries being above the billion mark.

IF YOU BELIEVE that every man's death is fixed in advance, this interests you. IDENTIFIED AS MAN WANTED IN SLAYING OF DAVID CHENEY

Winthrop, Me., May 22.—For the first time since the shooting of Mrs. Emma M. Towns, the abduction of her niece, Miss Aida Heyward and the firing of their cottage, the activities of the authorities were directed toward a definite objective today.

They are searching for Archie L'Italien, alias George Lambert, who is wanted for the murder and robbery of David Cheney last Winter in the town of Durham.

The hunt for L'Italien got under way after two women had identified his photograph as that of a man they saw on Lake Maranacook before and after the burning of the Heyward cottage.

$45,000 RAID BARES RUNNERS' HUB ROUTE

A new liquor-smuggling route—one of the fifty-seven varieties not bottled up by the Armada—was seen today in the seizure of $45,000 in choice liquors, boxed as fish and brought to Boston on the steamship Van.

Customs officials, headed by Deputy Surveyor of the Port Thomas F. Finnegan and assisted by the harbor police, seized the liquor, declared to be the finest stock yet smuggled into the Hub.

But the raiders are firm in their belief that much more than the quantity seized was got safely away from the dock before the storm broke. Addresses of three exclusive Boston clubs on the "fish" cases are be-

NURMI TAKES A NAP; PLANS RACE OF LIFE

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

The thousands of fans who gather at Harvard Stadium early this evening are sure to see Paavo Nurmi of Finland at his best.

In an interview today the peerless Phantom Finn, said he was out not only to smash Norman Taber's American record of 4 minutes 12 3-5 seconds, but also to place a new mark for the mile which will stand for some time.

Nurmi said, through an interpreter: "I feel sure that I will break a record late this afternoon."

Should the Finn accomplish this feat the 45,000 fans who will be on hand will get a great thrill.

I norder to be in the best of condition for the race, Nurmi retired

WILSON IN CANADA, DISCHARGES 3 COPS

For the third successive day Police Commissioner Wilson dropped a little blue envelope in the mails. Traffic Officer Joseph Patenaude received his notice that he was an ex-policeman.

As in the case of the two previous officers dropped from the force via the mails from Canada, where the commissioner is sojourning, Traffic Officer Patenaude has requested a public hearing.

He was charged before a trial board with conduct unbecoming an officer, in that he was under the influence of liquor when they detained him at the station, waiting to turn him over to his Boston superior officers.

Patenaude, according to witnesses, drank tonic at the man's stand and then departed with several bottles without paying for them.

When the tonic vendor remonstrated, Patenaude is alleged to have fired four shots in his general vicinity, bringing Chief Sullivan and Patrolman Kelly of the Lexington police to the scene.

Both Lexington police officers testified that Patenaude was under the influence of liquor when they detained him at the station, waiting to turn him over to his Boston superior officers.

CRASH FATAL TO HUB FIRE CHIEF'S DRIVER

Racing to a fire in Dorchester, Chief Owen T. Norton, driver for District Chief Charles Long, drove his speedster into a truck. He and Chief Long were thrown out. Norton suffered multiple injuries. He died today in City Hospital. Long was bruised and cut. He did not go to the hospital. The fire was at No. 10 Charles street, Dorchester. The house was occupied by the families of John W. McLean, Captain John J. Leary of the Boston Fire Department and William Quinn. The damage was $3,500.

WEEKS LEAVES CAPITAL FOR BOSTON TONIGHT

Washington, May 22 (A.P.).—Secretary Weeks will leave Washington today to return, a search was made which resulted in discovery of the body, with trawls still coiled in their tubs, but with doryman and oars missing.

The weather was fairly clear on the day in question, with a choppy sea which was not rough enough to trouble an experienced fisherman. The crew of the Noonan were unable to understand how a fisherman could have been lost as long as he had a pair of oars to sustain him, assuming he lost his balance and fell overboard. According to the crew Frazer had lived apart from his wife for many years.

NORTH POLE TRIP SUCCESS, NORWAY DISPATCHES SAY

London, May 22 (I.N.S.)—Captain Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, has been successful in his airplane dash for the North Pole, according to reports today reaching Oslo, Norway, from King's Bay.

The report, via Central News, said the two planes had started the return trip.

New York, May 22 (A.P.)—The North American newspaper Alliance said at noon today tha tit had received no word of the progress of the Amundsen polar flight since the planes hopped off at King's Bay, Spitzbergen, yesterday afternoon.

No communication is possible, the Alliance said, since the planes have no wireless, and no report will be available until the party land at a point where there is communication with the outside world.

Oslo, Norway, May 22 (I.N.S.)—If all went well with their aeroplanes, Captain Roald Amundsen and the American aviator, Lieutenant Lincoln Ellsworth, were at the North Pole today, making scientific observations.

They should have arrived at the pole at 1 o'clock this morning, having "hopped-off" from Spitzbergen, a Danish Island north of Norway, at 5:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

OLYMPIA'S LAWYER BEGS FOR HER LIFE

By BERT FORD

New Haven, Ct., May 22.—"Let your verdict in this case serve notice to corner sleiks that they cannot betray our girls and laugh," urged Attorney Joseph Kadelsky, in his final plea to the jury today at the trial of Olympia Macri, accused of slaying "Sheik" John Bagnano.

"I know you will not hesitate to acquit this girl on the plea of self-defence," he continued. "We don't know, gentlemen of the jury, but that her act may have saved women relatives or friends of our own from similar attacks by wretches like Bagnano.

"When men of Bagnano's breed—the sleek who were a Prince of Wales but sold balloon trousers—want to trap a woman they resort to dope. That's their game!

"They don't think anything of womanhood at home. A woman's name means nothing to them. They hold nothing sacred.

FISHERMAN LOST IN MYSTERY OF THE SEA

Another mystery of the sea was revealed today with a fishing schooner Elizabeth W. Noonan, Captain Richard Stanfield, arrived at the Fish Pier with flag at half mast, reporting the disappearance of Thomas Frazer, fifty-five years old, member of the crew.

Frazer, lived in East Boston, was married and has one child. He disappeared from his dory May 16, off Sable Island Bar, Western Banks.

He had left the schooner in the morning alone to set and haul trawls. At dusk when Frazer failed supplies and equipment sufficient for two days and this gave rise to the belief that they would attempt to land at the Pole to make scientific observations.

The distance, via air, from Spitzbergen to the theoretical position of the North Pole, is approximately 600 miles, and they said before starting that they thought they could make the round trip in eight flying hours.

Two machines made the flight, one in command of Amundsen, the man who discovered the South Pole, and the other piloted by Ellsworth.

Both machines are of the Dornier-Wal type and carried fuel for a flying radius of six thousand miles.

Weather conditions at Spitzbergen were favorable and each man had clothing and food to make the return journey on foot, in case of accident.

Due Back This Afternoon if Planes Cannot Land

London, May 22 (A.P.).—The news that Captain Roald Amundsen, after two disappointments in previous years, had finally hopped off from Spitsbergen in his long cherished attempt to reach the North Pole by air, caused much interest here, where the Norwegian explorer is prominently known through his previous record in Arctic and Antarctic discoveries.

If a favorable landing place is not found at the Pole, the journey from King's Bay to the Pole and return should occupy about eighteen hours, and the planes should be back at King's Bay this afternoon.

If trouble develops and the planes must be abandoned, the party will try to reach Cape Columbia, Greenland, where the Parry Expedition had a base.

Experts familiar with polar exploration are of divided opinion regarding Amundsen's chances of success. There is complete unanimity in the belief that the undertaking is one of extreme hazard. It is pointed out that the very fine weather which has been reported from the Polar region recently adds to the probability of fog, the airman's dangerous enemy, because any warmth in the atmosphere above the open icefields is said to be almost certain to cause evaporation and consequent mists.

There is also a likelihood, experts say, that Amundsen will experience the greatest difficulty in landing in the Polar regions. While the start of the flight from King's Bay was facilitated by a smooth fall of snow which allowed the runners on the bottom of the planes to move easily over the surface, the snow at the Pole might be found rough, and frozen into hard hummocks, making landing perilous.

Every Man in Polar Party Is an Expert at His Job

The following are the six members of the Amundsen-Ellsworth expedition who hopped off yesterday in two airplanes in an attempt to reach the North Pole.

CAPTAIN ROALD AMUNDSEN is one of the leaders of the expedition and an observer in one of the planes. Amundsen, in 1912, was the first to reach the South Pole. He is also the discoverer of the North Magnetic Pole and was the first to traverse the Northwest Passage.

LINCOLN ELLSWORTH is the sole American among the fliers. He is a co-leader with Amundsen in the expedition and, like the Norwegian, is an observer in one of the planes. He was born in Chicago in 1880. He attended Columbia University, New York city, and later McGill University, Montreal. He was a railroad engineer in Canada and a mining engineer in Northern Alaska. As a member of the United States Biological Survey he spent three years making a collection of mountain sheep from Mexico to the Yukon. During the war he served as an instructor at the American Aviation School in Tours, France.

HJALMAR RIISER-LARSEN, pilot, is thirty-five, married, and lives at Oslo. He is a lieutenant in the Norwegian Navy, which he entered in 1909. He studied airship construction and aviation in England.

LEIF DIETRICHSON, pilot, is thirty-five, married, and lives at Horten, Norway. He is a lieutenant in the Norwegian Navy. He has commanded naval and merchant ships.

OSKAR OMDAHL, mechanic, is twenty-nine, single, and lives at Kristiansand, Norway. He has been associated with Amundsen for three years as an airplane pilot and mechanic. He was on the steamer Maud in 1922 when an attempt was made to have the ship drift from Alaska across the North Pole. He studied aviation at Mineola, L. I.

CARL FEUCHT, mechanic, is thirty-one, single, and lives at Friedrichshafen, Germany. He is regarded as probably the premier living Dornier aero-mechanic. He served during the war on all fronts, including the Turkish, as a flight mechanic.

Will Return Via Alaska if Forced to Tramp Back

London, May 22 (I.N.S.).—Roald Amundsen, who left Spitsbergen to fly to the North Pole, may return by way of Alaska, if his two hydroplanes are found to be incapable of making the return trip.

It was pointed out here today that unless he finds a water area sufficiently large to permit his hydroplanes to land, Amundsen is apt to wreck his planes on the ice fields. In that case he might follow Admiral Peary's trail toward Columbia, on Ellesmere Island.

Columbia is the nearest point of land to the North Pole, 200 miles north of Greenland and some 400 miles due west of the pole. Amundsen carried sufficient supplies to enable him to take the longer return by foot. He probably would cover twelve miles a day.

Pytheas in North 2,250 Years Ago

Best known dates in North Polar exploration:

326 B. C.—Pytheas, Greek navigator, sails for Far North. Probably first white man to approach Arctic Circle.

1194 A. D.—Norsemen discover Spitsbergen.

1610—Henry Hudson discovers Hudson Bay.

1616—William Baffin explores country north of Hudson Bay.

1728—Vitus Bering discovers straits between North America and Siberia.

1818—Voyages by Sir John Barrows, Edward Parry, John Franklin and others, including the Scandinavian.

1894-6—Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, in ice-locked Fram, drifts across Polar ice-cap. Sledging party reaches 86.5 N.

1897—S. A. Andree, Swedish aeronaut, leaves north of Spitsbergen in balloon to cross Pole. Never heard of afterward.

1901—Duc d'Abruzzi, from land base, beats Nansen's record by twenty-two miles.

1901—Roald Amundsen visits North Magnetic Pole.

1906—Robert E. Peary advances thirty-two miles further than d'Abruzzi to within 174 miles of the Pole.

1909—Peary reaches the Pole.

GENERAL ROBERT LEE BULLARD, continuing in the next Boston Sunday ADVERTISER his "inside story" of the Great War, describes his campaign of hate against the Germans.

This map shows how Amundsen and his party routed their trip. It also shows how, in case of accident to their planes, the present party can head for northern Greenland by Peary's trail and walk back home.

Airplane Makes Pole a Four-Hour Trip

A STRIKING illustration of the march of progress is furnished in a comparison of the successful Polar dash ended by Admiral Robert M. Peary on April 6, 1909, and the attempt of Roald Amundsen today. The comparison follows:

HOOVER WARNS OF SEA FOOD FAMINE

Washington, May 22 (A.P.).—Sea food resources along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, now dwindling year by year, can and ought to be increased, Secretary Hoover said today in opening a special conference of representatives of States concerned.

He pleaded for State and Federal co-operation, declaring something "definite and real" should be done "to save our Atlantic Coast fisheries from final destruction."

"The difficulty on the Atlantic seaboard rests with the divided authority as between the States. No one State can of its own action give adequate protection to any single zone of our Atlantic coast fish.

"Thirty years ago the annual take of shad in the States from Georgia to New York was 50,000,000 pounds per annum. But from over-fishing the catch has steadily decreased until during the last few years it has averaged less than 13,000,000 pounds per annum. They sell for about $1.75 per fish. Towns and villages which formerly thrived upon them are growing poorer and poorer."

2 NAVY DESERTERS HELD ON FORGERY CHARGES

St. Albans, Vt., May 22.—Penniless and charged with forging checks for thousands of dollars, James W. Rice, twenty-eight years old, who gave his address as Wallo Creek, Texas, was arrested here by Sheriff George P. Catlin.

A companion of Rice, who gave the name of Ralph Golding, also was arrested, while he was working on a farm in Fairfax.

Sheriff Catlin received a telephone call from the United States navy yard in Brooklyn, asking him to hold the two men as they were deserters from the navy.

Charles Lathrop Pack, of Lakewood, N. J., president of the American Nature Association and a noted forest economist, has provided a fund of $25,000 to be used in the establishment of a "John Grier Hibben Fellowship" in the proposed Walter Hines Page School of International Relations. It is planned to found the Page School at John Hopkins University.

NIGHT AIRWAYS TO CRISS-CROSS THE U. S. SOON

Chicago, May 22 (I.N.S.).—An electrically lighted airway extending from Chicago to New York and eventually from coast to coast, and from Mexico to Canada over which scores of planes will fly day and night carrying consignments of freight and express for delivery on either coast within eight hours—this was the vision of twentieth century progress opened up here today as secrecy surrounding the organization of the $10,000,000 National Air Transport, Inc., here yesterday gradually dropped away.

Service over this modern speedway will be inaugurated early in the Fall when the Chicago-New York link will be put into operation, and within a year, it is hoped, air contact will be established with every principal city in the nation.

According to the tentative program, planes will leave New York nightly at 9:30 and will arrive in Chicago at 5 a. m.

No passengers will be carried.

The planes, to be furnished probably by the Fords, will be directed as they fly by radio as a result of the recent successful experiments in radio conversation from planes to earth stations here.

No formal announcement concerning the new organization had been made but it became known that among those interested are William Wrigley, Jr., Marshall Field, III., Edsel Ford, the Curtis Aeroplane & Motor Company and the Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

Howard E. Coffin of the Hudson Motor Car Company, Detroit, will head the new organization as president, according to reliable information, Clement Keyes, of Curtis Corporation, will be chairman of the executive committee; Paul Henderson, second assistant Postmaster-General, will resign August 1, it is said, to become general manager.

DENNISTOUN SUIT PAID BY CARNAVON PROPERTY

London, May 22.—A small portion of the great Carnavon collection of antiques, china and bric-a-brac has been auctioned for $400,000 to help pay the costs of the recent suit of Mrs. Dorothy Muriel Dennistoun against Colonel Ian Dennistoun, now the husband of the Countess of Carnarvon.

MAINE LINE LEAKS.

Labelled "herring," "sardines" and other fish names, the cases are believed by the Federal men to have been packed with the liquor in a Maine seaport town near Machias, after being smuggled across the Canada-Maine border.

At Bangor, Me., today prohibition officials admitted that nearly the entire border line is leaking a flood of liquor as a result of the sea blockade established off the coast.

A network of quiet, cozy inlets from the sea mark the Maine coast, well adapted to secrecy in handling liquor, and it is thought that these inlets are the new water starting points for liquor down the coast.

Nineteen men took part in the raid with Deputy Surveyor Finnegan, including the nine men of his liquor squad and ten customs guards and harbor policemen under command of Sergeant Lawrence T. Dunn.

The Van had unloaded her cargo at Commercial Wharf, but for some reason moved over to Pier 2 in South Boston, where the liquor was seized later on a tip received by the Federal men.

SKIPPER ARRESTED.

Captain McLean, skipper of the steamer, was arrested today at his home in Everett, according to Federal authorities. At the same time W. H. Burton, managing owner of the Maine Coast and Canada Steamship Company, was being questioned in connection with the case.

The steamship was recently acquired by the company, formerly the Burton Line, and operates from Boston to Portland and some of the smaller Maine ports, usually touching at Southbay Harbor, Prospect Harbor, Bass Harbor and Jonesport.

In the raid eleven members of the crew were arrested for arraignment before United States Commissioner Jenney.

They were booked as follows: Millard R. Davis, thirty-five, of Machias, Me.; Theodore R. Wakefield, twenty, of Gouldsboro, Me.; Louis Barnett, forty; Robert Halliday, twenty-one, of Spokane, Wash.; Joseph Bell, twenty-five, of New York City; William F. Tracey, Oscar O. Hayward, nineteen; William Bent, forty-four; Charles E. Worcester, twenty-nine; Leland J. Smith, twenty, and Austin L. Kelley, forty-eight, all of Jonesport, Me.

CLEAN BROKE.

When searched they were found to be completely "broke."

They stated that they did not know that any liquor was aboard the ship, being of the opinion that the consignment was made up of fish and meats for prominent Boston society clubs.

Owing to the value of the goods, Sergeant Dunn and the Harbor police guarded all entrances leading to the wharf, while custom officials and laborers went to work unloading the ship. More than 1,000 cases were removed and stored away in a vacant dock house. Later in the day the goods will be loaded onto the Dresser and taken to the Appraisers' Stores on Northern avenue.

The steamship was taken to Pier 2 at East Boston, where it will remain under guard as a seized vessel until disposition is made in the courts.

It was learned today that the liquor was consigned to three very exclusive clubs and that it was to be unloaded at 1 o'clock this morning, placed in provision company trucks and delivered to the clubs before daybreak.

To the harbor police, especially to Sergeant Dunn and Officer Morrill and Curtivan, is due no small amount of praise for their part in the seizure. The information that led to the arrest of the men on the Van and also to the seizure was given to the harbor police.

CAILLAUX PLAN CALLS FOR MORE TAXATION

Paris, May 22 (A.P.).—The French Cabinet in a meeting today approved the preliminary measures of Finance Minister Caillaux for the balancing of the budget. Details were not revealed, but it is understood the plans include the levying of additional taxation and the withdrawal of receipts from Germany under the Dawes plan payments from the budget, so a part can be devoted to payment of interallied debts.

M. Caillaux repeated that the French government had sent no note to Washington regarding France's debts to the United States.

Back in Prison, Why?---By Donald Lowrie

LIFE NEAR LOST BY NEW YORK DEBAUCH

Knocked Down and Disfigured as Lecture Talk Was Scheduled

Back in a felon's cell, after nearly fourteen years of freedom, a victim of his own weakness, and slowly dying of tuberculosis, Donald Lowrie describes the path of sin and shame he trod. Paroled to finish his great book, "My Life in Prison," he gained the confidence of governors and many high in civic and industrial life.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

I HAD filled two or three of the lecture engagements and began to feel that I had an important message for the New York people when I slipped another cog, and incidentally came within an ace of losing my life.

Osborne was stopping at the University Club, but came over to the Harvard Club for luncheon nearly every day. We were meeting many prominent persons—at least I was—and seldom lunched without guests.

Daily and hourly it was becoming more and more imperative that I should keep myself fit, that I might retain the standing I had acquired and prove that an ex-convict could rise to the intellectual and social level of the refined environment in which I found myself.

One day after lunch I was left to my own devices. I had been spending the mornings at my desk and the afternoons had been taken up with various engagements — calls, matinees, 5 o'clock teas and the like, but this afternoon I was free.

An Eventful 'Afternoon Off'

I was scheduled to speak before the Colony Club at luncheon the next day, and the importance of the engagement made me feel that I ought to devote some time to the preparation and memorizing of notes. I started to return to my room upstairs with that purpose in view, but instead of doing so I yielded to a desire for a walk. A few minutes later I was standing at a Broadway bar gulping a glass of whisky.

All that afternoon I continued to drink, visiting various saloons. Dusk came, but I did not return to the club for dinner. I recall being in a corner saloon on Seventh avenue about 9 o'clock that night, but do not know how I got over to that section. Some time later when I attempted to board an eastbound car on Forty-second street, with the intention of getting back to my quarters I missed the handrail, lost my balance and was precipitated into the street. An automobile just missed me, striking me a glancing blow that knocked me forward on my face.

What the Mirror Showed Next Day

I was bleeding when I arose, and made haste to get away from the crowd that had miraculously gathered. A passing taxicab stopped at my signal and took me aboard. I stanched the flow of blood from my nose, forehead and chin as best I could, and when the cab arrived at the curb I managed to get to the elevator and up to my room without attracting attention. I washed my wounds, ordered a drink sent up from downstairs, and retired with my face bandaged.

Next morning when I looked into the glass I was crestfallen. There were four raw places on my face, and I was scheduled to speak at one of the most influential and exclusive organizations of the city at 12:30. I decided that the engagement would have to be canceled and was about to call up Osborne and tell him I had been in a slight accident, when a knock came at my door and he walked in.

For some reason I did not lie to account for the bruises. I told him I had imbibed too much the night before and had fallen on my face while trying to board a car to get home.

Too Forgiving Spirit Questioned

I expected him to censure me, but after a brief expression of regret he said something about getting me "patched up" so that I could keep the engagement for that noon. Of coure, Osborne had not the remot-

BRIDEGROOM IN JAIL; GIRL, 17, SENT HOME

Leominster, May 22.—Clarence W. Miller, thirty-two, of Fitchburg, who last Sunday eloped with Miss May Benson, seventeen, from the bride's home in Buffalo and was arrested yesterday afternoon, was arraigned today with his bride before Judge Franklin Freeman.

Miller was charged with abduction and the girlbride with vagrancy. The girls' case was dismissed for lack of evidence, while Miller, who pleaded not guilty, was held in $1,000 on the understanding that he would waive extradition upon the arrival of Buffalo police today.

After the hearing the girl was remanded to the custody of her brother, Richard Benson, of Fitchburg. She left the courtroom without further word with Miller. The husband was held in the local lockup.

The arrest of the couple was made in the little cottage colony at Whalom Park, Lunenburg. Police claim Miller has been married twice before. They were unable to learn of any divorce proceedings in either case.

Miller went to Buffalo two months ago, where he met and wooed Miss Benson. The parents refused to sanction the marriage and advised the couple to wait a year, which was agreed to, but later the couple changed their minds and eloped to Niagara Falls.

BELGIAN CABINET RESIGNS IN BODY

Brussels, May 22 (A.P.).—The recently-formed Cabinet of Premier Aloys Van de Vyvere was overthrown today by a non-confidence vote in the Chamber of Deputies of 73 to 88, with 9 not voting. Van de Vyvere and the entire Cabinet presented their resignations to the King.

Washington, May 22 (A. P.).—A definite delay in the funding of the Belgian debt to the United States is seen here today in the overthrow of the Belgian Cabinet, which had given assurances that negotiations were to begin in the very near future.

ACTON CHICKEN THIEF GETS YEAR IN JAIL

Acton poultry fanciers will sleep easier tonight, because Fred H. Wolff of Lowell will be in the East Cambridge jail. He was sentenced to one year today by Judge Nelson P. Brown in Middlesex Superior Court for stealing hens. His arrest afforded much satisfaction in Acton, for as result of Wolff's depredations, embattled farmers went sleepless many nights while protecting their chickens with shotguns. Wolff was charged with breaking and entering the henhouse of William N. Stokes on March 21 and larceny of several hundred hens. He pleaded guilty.

START FIGHT TO SAVE BOY FROM DEATH CHAIR

Philadelphia, May 22 (I.N.S.).—The first legal move to prevent fulfillment of the State's sentence of death in the electric chair for William Cavalier, convicted 16-year-old slayer of his grandmother, was made today when his counsel filed a formal appeal with the State Supreme Court for a new trial. The case is scheduled to be heard the first week in September at Pittsburgh.

LECTURES 9 DUCKING NURSES

Victim From Ireland in Westboro Hospital Escapade Is Said to Be Tale-Bearer

Westboro, May 22—When nine nurses of the Westboro State Hospital threw Nurse Martha O'Rourke into a tub full of ice-cold water, they were only "hazing" her.

They didn't mean any real harm, they told Judge W. H. Fowler in District Court today.

Judge Fowler accepted their explanation, even if it didn satisfy Miss O'Rourke. After hearing to them plead guilty to chums of assault he talked to them a bit and filed the cases.

DUCKED IN CLOTHING.

"Hazing is falling into dispute," he said, "in colleges and prep schools, and, I assume, in hospitals, too.

"But, unless my memory of school days fails me, the person who is hazed and takes the thing to court soon becomes exceedingly unpopular."

Miss O'Rourke came to this country from Ireland about a year ago. As a nurse, the other girls at Westboro didn't like her. They alleged she was a tale-bearer and a trouble-maker; the thing reached a climax when nine of them pounced upon her and doused her in the bathtub, clothes and all.

The "lanee" scrambled out as fast as she could, according to the evidence. She was not injured in any way.

FIRST CHARGED ELEVEN.

There was nothing racial about the ducking of the girl from Ireland.

The eleven she originally accused of attacking her were Delia Membruquette, Mary Dinmon, Ellen Henderson, Josephine Flynn, Emma Wells, Hannah Steele, Rena Burke, Jean Gauthier, Lillian Bearne, Malvina Kasinski and Mary Kelley.

All but Miss Kelley and Miss Kasinski pleaded guilty. They said they were detained and had no chance to get in on the ducking. So they were discharged.

BOOT AND SHOE UNION NAMES LOVELY AS HEAD

Montreal, May 22 (A.P.).—Collis Lovely of St. Louis was elected general president of the Boot and Shoe Workers of America for the third consecutive time at today's session of the organization's convention, Rochester, N. Y., was selected for the 1927 convention.

C. L. Baine was re-elected general secretary, and Gail Martindale of Rochester was re-elected general vice-president. The executive board includes W. M. Hatch, Brockton, Mass.; J. N. Gorman, Rockland, Me.; F. E. Cook, Boston; Z. L'Esperance, Montreal; A. M. Lawrence, St. Louis, Clara Katzer, Chicago; J. J. Mars, Cincinnati; C. W. Lawson, St. Paul.

CARLSTEIN MISSING 12 YEARS

Famous Policeman, Known to Many Financiers, Dropped Out After Row With Wife

Lige a wraith from out the long forgotten past, a strapping hulk of a man, blond and with piercing eye, swung into City Hall today and entered the office of City Auditor Rupert S. Carven.

"You have some money for me?" the stranger questioned. "I'm Carl Carlstein."

It was a name that meant nothing to the auditor for a moment or two, but then, in a lightning flash of memory, his brain carried him back over a dozen years to the mysterious disappearance of Carl Carlstein, retired Boston policeman, the "Swedish Count" of stormy guard room memory.

KNOWN TO NOTABLES.

Since 1913, when the city of Boston pensioned Carl Carlstein, his name has graced the rolls of missing persons. One or two payments on his pension he collected—then vanished as quietly and as mysteriously as he came back today.

No move he visited City Hall on pension payment days and no more the desks of division stations out of which he had patrolled during his eighteen years as a bluecoat, felt the tall bulk of his 200-pound frame leaning against them on brief visits.

Financiers, such as Thomas W. Lawson, who had been in the habit of greeting daily until his pension, the big blond crossing policeman with the trim and trig whit smoustache and distinguished white goatee, asked questions but finally forgot to ask.

His crossings were at State and Devonshire street and at State street and Merchants row, where his distinguished bearing and his more than six feet of frame, brought him countless glances of admiration. He was the most distinguished appearing man on the force.

There was a story about trouble with his wife, even before the runaway accident that gave him an injury and a pension. In 1902 they had separated and Mrs. Ingeborg Carlstein had gone back to Sweden to live.

PENSION KEPT INTACT.

Three years went by and Mrs. Carlstein came to Boston where she asked the aid of the police in finding her husband and attempted to collect some of his pension money that was being held for him each week.

But the amount was kept intact and added to regularly, while the whereabouts of the "Swedish Count" continued to be hidden in mystery.

The war closed, the policemen struck and Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis, whose protege Carlstein was supposed to have been, died and was buried, but still none of the old timers or the old haunts saw the big blond policeman.

A fortune was reported by his wife to be awaiting him, to be given through the death of his mother in Pastille, but the newspaper stories brought no word or gesture from the missing man.

LONG SEARCH FUTILE.

A suggestion that he might be in Reno seeking a divorce, a suggestion made by Mrs. Carlstein, brought a hunt in Nevada with just as baffling results.

In due course, time dimmed memory of him generally and except in the auditor's and treasurer's office at City Hall and on the long scroll of missing persons, his name was erased through sheer forgetfulness.

His attorney, Arthur P. Teele, was with Carlstein today when the ex-policeman, grim of visage and with carriage like that of a viking of old, entered City Hall in the manner of a man who has gone out for just a few minutes, and demanded his money.

HARVARD'S 'GRAND MAN' POSES

A full figure seated, and a bust, of President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot will soon be in place at Harvard. This picture shows Dr. Eliot posing and intently watching Sculptor C. S. Paolo as he shapes the features. When the model is complete, the bust will be made in marble.

Commissioned from an unknown source to complete a marble statue of Charles W. Eliot, which when finished will be presented to Harvard as a testimonial of Dr. Eliot's accomplishments for education and the university, Sculptor C. S. Paolo of New York has been working on the likeness of the noted educator for several weeks.

The marble statue will be slightly greater than life size and there in the well-known halls of John Harvard the life of Dr. Eliot will remain immortal.

"Hale and hearty and still going fine," advised the eminent scholar as he posed exclusively for the pictures for the International Newsreel with the sculptor. Dr. Eliot enjoyed his ninety-first birthday last March.

The cast for the statue is complete and will be sunned to New York where it will take on the marble finish.

Posing for the license at his home will be made.

P. O. GUNS READY, THUGS!

Postmaster Baker Warns the Guards to Keep the Weapons in Perfect Condition

Postmaster Roland M. Baker today issued a warlike manifesto to the armed employes of the postoffice in charge of mails containing valuables.

Beginning with the motto "An adequate defense requires preparedness," he instructs the armed employes that their arms "must at all times be in perfect condition—else they will become worthless in an emergency, such as a holdup."

After giving armed employes detailed instructions for the care, oiling and cleaning of their arms and ball cartridges, and as to changing cartridges when the old ones become corroded, he declared that the rules were inviolable and "highly essential to having firearms give the perfect result you would expect when they are resorted to in unexpected situations."

in Cambridge, the educator and the sculptor have been working together at the instigation of an announced commission, who wish to immortalize th educator and a retaking this means of imbuing Harvard with the spirit.

U. S. Girls Hide Bobs When They Visit Queen

London, May 22 (I.N.S.).—Shingled heads of American debutants have bowed to the unofficial royal edict disapproving bobbed hair, it was evident today. A majority of the girls presented at the court had bobbed hair, but it was artfully disguised.

The art of the coiffeurs were what wrought the change. There had been rumors that Queen Mary disapproved of shingled locks.

HYLAN IS GRANDDAD FOR SECOND TIME

New York, May 22 (A.P.).—Mayor Hylan became a grandfather for the second time today when a girl was born to his daughter, Mrs. John F. Sinnott, whose husband is the Mayor's secretary. The mayor's other grandchild, a son of the Sinnott's, is four years old.

Asked what he intended to name his granddaughter, Mr. Hylan on leaving the hospital after his first visit of the infant replied:

PLANE IN HUNT FOR MAINE WOMAN

same side as the burned camp, said that on Tuesday afternoon a man paddled a canoe to a point within fifty feet from the front of her cottage.

On reaching this point the man halted his canoe, Mrs. Weymouth said, and after gazing at her cottage for several minutes, turned and paddled away. She positively identified Lt. Italien's photograph as that of the man she saw in the canoe.

SCARED LITTLE GIRL.

Mrs. Wallace Cook, who lives near the spot where the abandoned canoe was found on the lake shore, told the authorities she saw a man leave the craft about seven o'clock Wednesday morning. He stared so hard at her little girl, who was playing on the shore, that the child became frightened and called to her mother.

Mrs. Cook said she went to the side of her daughter, and the stranger, after eyeing both malevolently for several minutes, turned on his heel and walked toward the town.

The authorities believe that this man, now identified as Lt. Italien was the person seen by Mrs. Elizabeth Griffin, in a canoe in the middle of the lake, some fifteen minutes before the fire was discovered. Mrs. Griffin said she was awakened by a noise and looking from a window, saw a moving object, either a boat or a canoe, on the surface of the lake.

This would fit in with the theory that the abductor took Miss Heyward in a canoe across the lake to one of the unoccupied Summer camps, where he either killed her or kept her a prisoner.

Sweeping over mountains and lakes in an airplane, two State policemen today took up the search for Miss Heyward's abductor.

HUNTED BY PLANE.

The policemen, Foster King, pilot, and Bert Fowler, observer, took the air after Carime, a Doberman Pinscher police dog from the Vermont kennels of the famous Deeka and the same breed had refused to pick up a trail.

It was hoped that the airmen might discover a newly dug grave which other policemen, armed with lanterns and flashlights, were unsuccessful in discovering in a tour of the railroad track last night.

The decision to use an airplane in the search was reached at a conference attended by Governor Ralph O. Brewster, Attorney-General Ray E. Fellows and County Attorney Frank Southard.

The authorities are proceeding on the theory that Miss Heyward was murdered and her body buried somewhere on the shores of Lake Maranacook, within striking distance of the isolated camp.

They are working on this line pending the further recovery of Mrs. Towns, who had rallied from her relapse today sufficiently to take food, but could not be interviewed for twenty-four hours, according to Dr. Badger, her physician.

When the woman's condition warrants it, the police plan to grill her again in an attempt to clear up the many discrepancies which were discovered in her story.

It is believed that she has told but little of what actually happened Tuesday night, after she and her niece returned to the cottage from an entertainment in Winthrop Village.

It is considered significant that Carime, a trained trail follower, should have failed to pick up any trail leading from the ruins of the cottage.

Admitting the trail if it existed would have been cold, it is nevertheless contended that a dog of this type, trained in picking up scents, could have followed it.

Several times Carime, who was brought here over the road by Oscar Anderson, was put at the trail, but each time he displayed no interest.

While not a brother of Deeka, who discovered Earl Woodward and Lucille Chatterton at East Brookfield, Vt., Carime is of the same breed and considered his equal.

RESUMED BUSINESS.

The majority of the townsfolk, who yesterday pursued the search for Miss Heyward's abductor with unremitting fervor, today had given up the hunt and returned to their normal activities.

They believe that Mrs. Towns is concealing something, particularly after it was pointed out that it would have been possible for her to have shot herself.

EXPERT SHOT.

Another baffling angle of the case is the alleged disappearance of a 22-calibre revolver, said to have been owned by Miss Heyward. Ellsworth Heyward, uncle of the missing girl, told the police that Miss Heyward owned such a weapon. She used the gun frequently in target practice, the uncle said, and was an expert shot.

Miss Heyward's brother-in-law, Fred W. Moulton of Lexington, and her sister, Mrs. Moulton, were positive, however, that Miss Heyward did not own such a weapon. Police believe that Mrs. Towns was wounded by a 22-calibre bullet. No bullets were found in the wounds, however. The condition of the injuries and two holes in the cape worn by the woman at the time she as shot, were responible for the theory.

Chief of Highway Police Sanborn is in Waterville to interview a man and woman known to have been on Nigger Hill, near the estate of Mrs. Gertrude Heath to which a dog traced a scent.

The woman was reported as missing from the place she was taken to at Waterville.

The State is pinning its hopes of unraveling the mystery on the ability and willingness of Mrs. Towns to tell a connected story when she has more fully recovered.

The evidence obtained by State police, county authorities and the Wood Detective Agency was discussed at a long conference at the Augusta House by Attorney-General Ray E. Fellows, County Attorney Frank E. Southard and James R. Wood of Boston.

Following the conference a statement was issued by the officers who incidentally announced that Governor Brewster will add a substantial reward for the capture of the madman and rescue of Aida Hayward to that already offered by relatives.

The statement of the officers says in part:

"Every agency of the State of Maine is at work in an effort to solve the mystery attending the assault upon Mrs. Emma Towns and the apparent abduction of Miss Alda Heyward.

"The State constabulary has summoned every man available for service. We have engaged the services of Boston detectives who have been successful in numerous important criminal cases

RADCLIFFE GIRL ENGAGED TO HARVARD MAN

Ohio Student Only Maid to Admit Her Betrothal at the Senior-Junior Luncheon

Being from Columbus, Constance Doe naturally made some discoveries at Radcliffe, but the most important one was made this year when she discovered she was in love.

Frederick Hill, of Brookline, junior at Harvard, is the boy, and Constance, who is a junior at Radcliffe, announced her engagement to the annual Junior-senior luncheon held in the Agassiz House at Radcliffe.

Barbara McQuesten

It is an annual custom for juniors and seniors to announce their engagements at this luncheon, but Constance was the only girl to come right out with the pretty words, although the girls are just sure that there are others who didn't own up.

Having announced her engagement, Constance danced all around the table to show that she was hilarious about it, even if she was from Ohio.

The girl who drew Constance's secret from her was Barbara McQuesten, a junior, who was toastmistress at the luncheon. Barbara is from Brookline.

In charge of the luncheon were Ruth Hicks of Concord, general chairman; Doris Lewis, Newtonville; Phryne Leland, Gardner; Estelle Johin of Watertown and Barbara Evans.

ROSLINDALE C. D. OF A. SPONSOR FOR PLAY

Court John J. Williams, No. 226, C. D. of A., is sponsoring the presentation of a musical comedy, "Watch Your Step," the proceeds from which will be given to the Very Rev. John F. Cummins, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Roslindale. This is the year of Fr. Cummins' golden jubilee, marking his completion of fifty years in the priesthood. Joseph Sheerin of the West End Council, K. of C., is the director of "Watch Your Step." There will be a matinee for the children Sunday afternoon, and the two evening performances will be on Monday and Tuesday at the St. Francis Xavier School Hall, Brown avenue, Roslindale. Miss Helen Everson is in charge of the tickets. Grand Regent Miss Lillian M. Hanrahan is general chairman, assisted by all the members of the court.

MISS MARY PRENDERGAST, COURT CLERK, BURIED

With many mederal officials and members of the clergy present, the funeral of Miss Julia Prendergast, for many years a clerk in the U. S. Commissioner's office, took place today. Solemn high mass was celebrated in St. Mary's of the Assumption Church, Brookline, by the Rt Rev. Mgr. Michael T. McMamus, the cortege having proceeded from Miss Prendergast's late home, No. 98 Lancaster terrace, Brookline.

The pallbearers were U. S. Commissioner William Nelson, Daniel A. Shea, Joseph V. Carroll, Dr. Wilfred G. Grandison, Chief Deputy U. S. Marshal James A. Tighe and Matthew A. McGrath. The honorary pallbearers were Judge Thomas H. Dowd, Dr. George W. Goode, Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan, Alexander Whiteside, James S. Allen, clerk of U. S. Court, and Robert E. Harding. Burial was at Mt. Benedict Cemetery.

WORLD PEACE IS FAVORED BY CLUBWOMEN

State Federation to Elect Its Officers at Swampscott Convention Today

Officers will be elected today by the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, in convention at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

There are about 2,000 delegates attending the convention. Mrs. Frederick Glazier Smith is presiding.

The federation is contemplating many lines of endeavor, particularly a ten-year campaign against tuberculosis among children.

After listening to several addresses, the delegates pledged their support, and the support of their local organizations to the public health authorities engaged in a war upon the white plague.

Mrs. A. A. Packard of Springfield, for the committee on international relations, reported that her committee was active.

"Our department is an important part of women's club work," she said, "International understanding is a matter of education. We are educating our people.

"We must think in terms of peace. We do think and speak and act in terms of peace. The old standards of militarism must be replaced by the new standards of brotherhood and sisterhood."

Mrs. John H. Kimball, chairman of the committee on education, advocated raising the compulsory school age and the increase of continuation schools.

Mrs. Myron Davis, Jr., chairman of the committee for Conservation of Natural Resources, spoke in favor of a $40,000,000 appropriation by Congress for national forestry.

The report of the nominating committee of the federation was made by Mrs. George O. Jenkins of Whitman.

Mrs. Fearing Warr of Wareham was among the visitors at the convention. Her home, Fearing House, is the oldest dwelling in Wareham. It was built by her great-great-grandfather.

CARDINAL TO SPEAK ON MOTHER SOPHIE BARAT

Cardinal O'Connell will deliver a panegyric on the Blessed Madeleine Sophie Barat, foundress of the Society of the Sacred Heart, on Commonwealth avenue, on Monday morning.

He will tell of the life work and character of this heroic and saintly woman, who is to be canonized with Blessed Marie Madeleine Postel next Sunday by the Pope.

The great work carried on by the spiritual daughters of Mother Barat in the archdiocese of Boston has always been especially dear to the heart of the cardinal.

Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman Radiant as Beacon Hill Fete Hostess

Billowing Gown Might Have Adorned Matron in Pages of Godey's Ladies' Book

Betty Alden

MRS. RONALD T. LYMAN of No. 39 Beacon street, just back from a visit in Chicago as the house guest of Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Jr. (Barbara Higginson), was a radiant figure in her rustling taffeta gown and rose-adorned chapeau of the 1860's as she received in the Sears dooryard at the Beacon Hill Fete.

THE gown, in its billowing fashion with bands of King's blue, might have adorned a matron in the pages of Godey's Ladies' Book, and its original did, indeed, belong in the wardrobe of Mr. Lyman's mother, Mrs. Arthur Lyman.

FOR a hat to accompany this sartorial creation of Civil War times, Mrs. Lyman donned a big tie affair of bright blue against black with clustered roses giving the effect of height at the back.

AT MRS. LYMAN'S right hand stood the youthful Dudley Clarke, Jr., playing the part of his grandfather, the handsome Governor Andrew, Massachusett's "War Governor" and one of the most distinguished appearing men of the times.

IT WAS quite fitting that these two descendants of notable New England lines should officiate at the Beacon Hill reception, for Mrs. Lyman's maternal grandmother, then a Miss Forrester, and Governor Andrew were friends back in the olden days.

THEY BOTH—the stately Mrs. Forrester of the Salem Forresters, and the notable head of the State government, belonged to what we now like to term the "upper tolerables," and had many friends throughout that set.

JUST NEXT DOOR, in the Sears mansion, to which a veritable throng went to see its treasures of carving and furniture, Miss Hope Gray was a delightful figure.

MISS GRAY was in a ruffled costume of the Sixties, an affair of lustrous taffeta such as ladies adored in those days, its color something between sea green and turquoise blue. It was a gown most becoming to Miss Gray's petite type.

FOR THE younger girls in their flounces and fringes, Mrs. Horace Morison's attic chests disgorged three as lovely costumes as graced the entire fete. They were all made by Worth in Paris (that source name known round the world of femininity).

MRS. MORISON says that they were worn by members of her family at the reception to the Prince of Wales back in the Sixties when that genial young Englishman came and saw and conquered Boston's World of Fashion as "Baron Renfrew."

MISS SALLY PARKER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Swinnerton Parker of No. 48 Mount Vernon street, wore one of the Worth gowns, taffeta in ecru and golden russet tones, a comb caught in her bright brown hair.

MOST CHARMING was she in the old-time array. And equally charming will she be when, as a debutante, she makes her bow to local Fashiondom next Autumn. Miss Parker is coming out, and the Parker home on the "Hill" will be a delightful setting for some of the hospitalities in her honor.

AT THE Fete it held what is probably a priceless collection

Miss Alice Herrick marries George Saltonstall Mumford, Jr., out at St. Michael's Church in Milton on June 23. Miss Herrick is the daughter of Robert Herrick, and the bridal will be extremely brilliant.

Priceless Collection of Dolls and Toys Enthrall Children and Their Elders of dolls and toys, owned by Mrs. Clark and containing a distracting profusion. Complete house furnishings and the tiny dolls to use them enthralled children and their elders as well.

JUST DOWN the Hill, at the Mount Vernon street home of Mrs. Robert Cushman, visitors exclaimed over the priceless antique wall paper, and the Mount Vernon bed spreads, to mention several of the treasures therein.

THE WALL paper is the pictorial sort beloved and sought by collectors, came originally from Alsace-Lorraine to the United States, by way of a French mansion in New Orleans, and so finally to the Cushman home.

MRS. CUSHMAN, with clustered "follow-me-lad" curls, such as the belle of the Sixties sported, in a rich old taffeta gown and lacy shawl, was a distinguished figure in her beautiful drawing-rooms.

ALFRED E. COX PASSES AWAY IN MALDEN

Ex-Member of the Governor's Council and a Political Leader Dies at 76

Alfred Elmer Cox, former member of the Governor's Council and well known Malden politician, died at his home on Appleton street, Malden, today at the age of seventy-six.

Mr. Cox was born in Malden August 31, 1848, and lived there all his life. He was the treasurer and general manager of the Atlantic Works, East Boston, and a director of the First Ward Bank in Boston. He held practically every municipal position of any importance with the exception of Mayor, before the town became a city.

He served as a member of the board of selectmen when Malden was a town and later on the school committee. He also served as town auditor, common councilman, alderman and as a member of the street commission. He was in the Governor's Council several years.

He was a member of Trinity Congregational Church and president of the Malden Deliberative Assembly. He belonged to a number of Masonic lodges, the Republican Club of Massachusetts, the Middlesex Club, Malden Club and other organizations.

THIRSTY BACK TO U. S. TO GET REAL BEER

Wayne B. Wheeler, Dry Head, Buys a Bottle, Then Calls It Slop; Ontario Profits Huge

Toronto, May 22 (A.P.).—Thousands of Americans living on Ontario's border have satisfied their curiosity but not their thirst.

"Fergie's Foam" is mostly froth. There is no kick in the "four by four" beer legalized by the Ferguson government, which went on sale yesterday. "Near Beer's Day."

All parts of the province reported no intoxication, not one drunk was arrested in the big city of Toronto.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, crossed the line as an observer, he said. For 30 minutes he said he sat in a Fort Erie hotel with a bottle before him on the table, but did not drink.

The bottles are labelled "4.4 proof spirits by weight" which means that by the volume the alcoholic content is 2.5 per cent.

Eight hundred dispensaries did a rush business yesterday throughout the province. Ferries from Detroit to Windsor were jammed. Chairs and tables were at a premium. Complaints were made about persons drinking while standing up. Hotel proprietors insisted the men had been served while seated, but rose to make room for newcomers.

The manager of the British-American Hotel in Windsor reported more than $1,500 profit for the day. It is estimated that 600,000 glasses of beer was consumed in Windsor alone. No arrests were reported. The prevailing price was 25 cents a bottle. The beer was not as yet on tap. Glasses were split from bottles.

Women drinkers were numerous. Table maids were employed by many hotels to attract patronage. Attorney-General Nickle ruled that the law contained no sex discrimination. Women, he said, might drink as well as serve the beverage.

Wine and Beer Vote to Be Asked in Illinois

Chicago, May 22 (I.N.S.).—As an immediate result of President Coolidge's determination to enforce the prohibition laws to the limit, leading "personal liberty" proponents have decided to ask a referendum in Illinois on light wines and beer.

They mapped a non-partisan campaign in next year's congressional elections. They will support both for representatives and senators, regardless of party labels, only those candidates who will sign the pledge to vote in Congress for a modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture and sale of wines and beer.

BAR NEGRO FROM CIRCUS; RACE RIOT THREATENS

Pine Bluff, Ark., May 22.—Ladd, a farming community twelve miles south of here, was the scene of a threatened race riot, but quick action by Jefferson County officers prevented bloodshed.

Authentic reports received here say fighting between negroes and white men began when a negro was refused admittance to a county circus. Men on both sides were armed.

Deputy sheriffs arrived from Pine Bluff and dispersed the mob before any shooting occurred.

FIRST CONSTITUTION DONATION BY ADMIRAL

Admiral Louis De Steiguer, commandant of the Boston navy yard, will present to Governor Fuller at 11:30 a. m., Monday, the first contribution to the fund to save the Constitution. The Governor will turn the money, raised by the officers and men of the navy yard, over to the committee in charge of the fund.

"NO MAN can escape his fate," says a German proverb, and superstition, which has frequently stimulated courage, has carried on the theory.

The ancient gentleman, warned by the oracle that he would be killed by a house falling on him, did not save himself by sleeping out of doors. A flying eagle dropped a huge turtle, crushing the man's head. The turtle's shell was its house.

MISS ROSE MARETTA, in private life Mrs. Gerber, and a grandmother sixty-six years old, recovering from a long illness, returns to horseback and trapeze work in the circus.

A woman should be healthier at sixty-six than at any younger age, says this determined grandmother, and she is right.

WOMEN HAVE one advantage, with all the hardships that have followed them since the episode of the apple and the snake.

Once they pass fifty their chance of long life is much better than that of a man past fifty. For this there are several reasons, the most important, that they behave themselves and give themselves a chance to live. Many old men don't do that.

U. S. SCIENTIST KILLED IN CRASH IN SYRIA

Geneva, May 22 (I.N.S.).—Samuel Taylor Darling, pathologist for the Rockefeller Foundation, and whose home was in Harrison, N. J., was killed today with two other persons in an automobile accident near Beirut, Syria.

The three persons killed were members of the League of Nations Committee for the study of malaria in Palestine. The automobile overturned while the party was traveling between Palestine and Syria.

JURY FREES GIRL WHO SLEW MAN ON WAGER

Mexico City, May 22 (A.P.).—Senorita Hortensia Cortes, lucky at cards, has won another hand against fate. A jury acquitted her of a charge of slaying Jose Concepcion Sancedo, whom, she testified, she killed after a wild party culminating in a game in which they bet their lives on the turn of a card. Her defense was that she was stupefied by liquor and not responsible for her act.

DRIVER GOODWIN FLAYED GETS 10 DAYS AND $50

Charles D. Vincent of Castleton street, arrested on February 28 for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, whose case drew a caustic statement from Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, in West Roxbury court today was sentenced to ten days and fined $50. He appealed and was held in $200.

Vincent's case was originally continued and he was then convicted and sentenced but took an appeal. Later he withdrew his appeal, the sentence was revoked and the case again placed on the docket, finally being disposed of today.

CONVICT LOWRIE'S ABSORBING STORY, "WHY I AM DYING IN PRISON

est idea that I was a confirmed drinker. He imagined, I assume, that I had gone out to see the white lights and had taken a little too much liquor.

And right here I would digress for a moment to say that it was this readiness to overlook my lapses that, perhaps, all unconsciously on my part, kept me from realizing the full iniquity of my behavior, not only as applying to Osborne, but to others. I had once heard Older say, when told that a drunkard's kindred and all friends had deserted him, "That means he needs help. We'll see what we can do for him."

The remark had struck me as big and noble, but at the same time I have often wondered if it did not also act as a sort of speculative safety station in my subconscious mind. The knowledge that he really soned that way was always with me afterward, and while I never deliberately speculated on its significance as applied to myself, I have since, in the effort to understand and conquer the insidiousness of alcohol, tried to decide whether or not forgiving friends are always wise. Who knows? Drunkards without friends go down anyway. Drunkards are sometimes saved.

Osborne looked me over and then suggested that we visit a dermatologist.

"I know a place close by where they will fix you up so that you'll look perfectly natural," he said.

An hour later when I contemplated myself in the hand mirror which the operator handed to be after sundry applications to my face, I was astonished and gratified. It took close inspection for me to see that there was anything amiss with my countenance.

The speech at the Colony Club was well received, though one elderly lady, much to my relief, went to sleep. She had been regarding me steadily through a good lorgnette, making me tearfully conscious of my made-up face. Osborne was with me and Lincoln Steffins was at our table also.

Farewell to 'Tom' Osborne

Altogether I remained in the East nearly three months, speaking at clubs, churches, schools, universities and civic organizations in various cities. The honorariums ran from $25 to $150, though in some cases the speaking was gratis. I never asked for anything. Such fees as I received were voluntary.

My last engagement was before the City Club in Philadelphia, and as I had a reservation for an early afternoon train to Washington, I was obliged to leave before the luncheon ended. I shook hands with Tom Osborne as unsentimentally as I could and left him there at the table. With the exception of my lapse in New York I had managed to keep sober and had acquitted myself well in the eyes of everyone. I think that having frequent speaking and other engagements requiring my presence in good trim before observing and critical people had a lot to do with my abstinence. At that time I still had a good quota of pride, sufficient, at least, to keep me halfway straight from day to day.

In Washington I was free from all restraint, and promptly got intoxicated, remaining there several days before leaving for St. Louis. There was no particular reason why I should have stopped in either Washington or St. Louis. I had been in both cities before. I must have made these stops solely with the idea of self-indulgence.

In St. Louis I ran out of money. I had a number of checks in my pocket. I spent an entire morning trying to get one of these checks cashed. But I was unknown there. I had a hotel bill to pay and wanted to continue my journey. Finally I thought of Marion Reedy, editor of the Mirror, and made my way to his very much disordered sanctum. He had read my first book and received me cordially, asking me to lunch. When we returned to his office I broached the subject of getting a check cashed. He laughed and said something about that being against his policy, but quickly added: "Of course, I don't know for a certainty that you're Donald Lowrie, but I think you are." Then he mused a moment before looking at me with a twinkle in his eye. "If I can't trust an ex-convict, who can I trust?" he asked. "How much is the check?" I took some papers from my inner coat pocket, seeking one of the smaller checks.

"Why, you've got a pocketful! A regular 'Croesus'!" he exclaimed. "Here, let me have them."

He was busy with a pencil for a moment and then reached in his desk for a check book.

Phoenix Destination in New Journey

"You might have trouble in other places," he laughed, "so I'm taking all the risk," and he handed me his personal check for the full amount.

I left St. Louis that night for Phoenix. While "My Life in Prison" had been running as a newspaper serial I had received an interesting letter of commendation from Hon. George W. P. Hunt, Governor of Arizona. I subsequently learned that the Governor, with Robert B. Sims as prison superintendent, had revolutionized the penitentiary conditions, doing away with the cruelties and other unconscionable abuses that had prevailed at the old Yuma prison, and to some extent at the new prison at Florence, after the Yuma prisoners had been transferred there.

I forget now whether I had a direct invitation from the Governor to visit the Florence prison as his guest, but it seems to me I had. At any rate, I left St. Louis with Phoenix as my next stopping place. Through inexperience as a traveler, I failed to get my reservation in the Phoenix Pullman, so was obliged to get off the main line train at Maricopa, where I arrived about 3 o'clock in the morning. In the darkness I could see only a few low shacks with one rather large bar and dance hall. The doors of the latter place were wide open, and from the station platform I could see a number of roughly dressed men and three or four short-skirted, multicolor attired women lined up along the bar. The music (?) started as I gazed, and a wild dance ensued.

Start of a Walk Over the Desert

I wanted a drink, or thought I did. Two or three times I started to cross the open space between the station and the dance hall, only to stop and turn back. I was totally unfamiliar with Arizona and its people at that time, and I had considerable money on my person. I feared that if I entered that saloon I would never get out of it sober, and would find myself penniless. I have since learned that a tenderfoot, even in those "wild and woolly" days, was nowhere safer than when surrounded by Arizona cowpunchers and miners. For half an hour I fluctuated between a drink and not a drink, and finally decided not to. I had until 4 a. m. to wait for the little train that was to take me to Phoenix, and I set off across the desert for a night walk.

MARY M'SWINEY PUTS OUT FREE STATE FRIEND

Arsonia, Ct., May 22 (A.P.).—Former Congressman P. B. O'Sullivan of Derby and Miss Mary MacSwiney of Ireland clashed at an Irish Republican meeting here. O'Sullivan was to be chairman, but when Miss MacSwiney heard his sympathies were with the Free State she demanded that he retire.

O'Sullivan retorted that he did not know who the speakers were to be, and that if Miss MacSwiney was to speak he would not act as chairman unless he could state that he, personally, did not believe in the methods of the Republicans, while he respected their sincerity. Miss MacSwiney refused to sanction such a statement.

ATLANTIC PASSENGER SERVICE MAY BE CUT

Glasgow, Scotland, May 22 (A.P.).—A possible drastic reduction in Atlantic passenger liner service was forecast by Chairman Henderson of the Anchor Line in addressing the company's annual meeting.

Most of the liners, he said, are at present sailing with an average vacancy in passenger accommodations of 50 p. c., as spread over the year. This was most wasteful and was not bringing in an adequate return on the capital. If it continues, he said, the sailings must be greatly reduced.

STANDARD OIL BACKS STRIKE IN CHINA

Canton, May 22 (A.P.).—Serious unrest exists in Canton. Disagreement on the part of the Yunnan and the Kwangsi provincial troops over distribution of opium and imposition of gambling taxes is the principal reason. To add to other difficulties, a split in the trades unions has resulted in threats of strike which would discontinue all public services. A strike was started because of the imposition of a tax of five cents a gallon on gasoline. The strike has the support of the Standard Oil Company of New York, the Texas Company and the Asiatic Petroleum Company.

MADMAN SWINGS AXE IN FIGHT WITH POLICE

Fitchburg Suspect, Sought on Serious Charge, Tries to Kill Two Officers

Fitchburg, May 22.—David Plapin, forty-seven years old, who lives in what the police describe as a "dog house," in the rear of No. 346 Summer street, was arrested early today, following a battle with two policemen, to which he threatened them with an axe.

Sergeant William Haskett and Patrolman Peter H. Murphy went to Plapin's home to serve a warrant charging him with attacking Miss Blanche E. Hamblin and Miss Lillian M. Smith of Blythe street.

The policemen knocked on the door of Plapin's abode and demanded that he let them in. Their demands were met with a defiant order to "Smash the door down and come and get me" from the man sought.

Obtaining a crow bar from headquarters, the officers forced the door and crashed into the room to be met by Plapin, armed with an axe.

$25,000 GIVEN PAGE SCHOOL BY C. L. PACK

John W. Hallowell, leader of the group of Boston men and women who are assisting in the raising of a $1,000,000 fund for the founding of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations, today announced a gift of $25,000 by Charles Lathrop Pack, of Lakewood, N. J., to be used in the establishment of a "John Grier Hibben Fellowship" at the proposed school.

It is planned to found the Page School at Johns Hopkins University.

According to Owen D. Young, of New York, chairman o fthe endowment fund, Mr. Pack, in making his gift, specified that it be applied for establishing a fellowship to honor President Hibben, of Princeton University, "in recognition of his influence for better international understanding and particularly in honor of his work for th epeople of Belgium during the World War."

GOVERNOR GIVES $100 AS 'POPPY DAY' BIT'

Governor Fuller buying poppy from pretty Aimee Forcini of "Topsy and Eva" company to aid fund being raised by Veterans of Foreign Wars. The Governor bought his poppy early and gave his generous bit—a $100 bill—with a smile.

THOUSANDS BUY POPPIES TO AID VETS

Really well-dressed men and women were wearing poppies in their button holes today.

It was Poppy Day. Tomorrow will be Poppy Day, too. The money made by the sale of the flowers will be used by the Veterans of Foreign Wars to care for disabled veterans hurt in the late unpleasantness.

President Coolidge, Governor Fuller and Mayor Curley have indorsed the drive. Joseph Gannon, chairman of the committee, means to sell more than 500,000 poppies.

One of the first poppies sold went to Governor Fuller, who is wholeheartedly behind the Veterans of Foreign Wars and one of the original boosters of Poppy Day.

SIX ARE KILLED BY STORM IN WEST

enver, Col., May 22.—Three deaths and three seriously injured was the toll today of a wind storm that reached cyclonic proportions in the northern and central parts of Colorado. Houses were unroofed, miles of telephone poles blown over and much property loss resulted.

Centralia, Ill., May 22.—Two persons were killed, three homes demolished, trees uprooted and other severe damage done here today by an electrical storm which swept this sectin of the State. Reports from McLeansboro were to the effect one man was killed there.

'FIRST LADY OF PALESTINE' IS CHOSEN

Like every other country Palestine has chosen its first lady of the land and the honor goes to Lady Beatrice Samuel, wife of Sir Herbert Samuel, high commissioner for Palestine.

The presentation of the brooch of precious gems symbolic of the honor conferred upon the titled English lady was made by Mrs. Nathan Straus of New York city for the organization of Hadassah, the woman's Zionist organization of America. The organization gave the gift to Lady Samuel thereby making her "First Lady in the Jewish Land—Palestine."

Hadassah, both senior and junior units, throughout the country have as their special branch of work in Palestine, the medical care, nurses' training schools and subsidizing of orphanages. Palestine's rebuilding is its aim and purpose and in making the presentation to Lady Samuel, it merely is adding another link to its already long chain of successes in the realization of Palestine as a native homeland for the Jews of the world.

Dr. Leon Bramson, who is to address the Lynn community on the great need of American aid for European stranded refugees, has a colorful history. At the present time he heads the organization of the Ort, which seeks relief for Jewish sufferers.

Born in Kovno, Russia, in 1869, he studied law at the Moscow University, practiced the art in St. Petersburg and rose gradually to become one of the leading jurists in Russia. His early efforts were given over to the organization of a society for the promotion of culture among the Jews which sponsored a statistical bureau under whose auspices he published two volumes dealing with the economic structure in Russia and its influence on the Jews.

MARTHA LEE'S RADIO CHAT

BROADCAST THROUGH STATION WNAC, SHEPARD STORES
By Martha Lee.

THE STORY OF LARD

Today I am going to tell you a few things that I think are interesting about Lard. The old rendering kettle of grandmother's time with its soot and its black and its teepee-like poles has gone the way of the spinning wheel and the hand loom, and fascinators and antimacassar, and the horse hair sofa of yesterday.

In its place there are the huge open kettles of the packing houses, fifty times greater in size than the kettles that grandmother used to use. But the method is the same and the lard is the same as grandmother prepared, and all we have to do in this age of hurly-burly is to go to market and buy it.

TWO KINDS OF LARD.

You know there are two kinds of lard—leaf lard, and what is known as "prime steam lard." There is a difference between these two that I am going to explain. The leaf lard is prepared from the leaf-shaped rolls of fat.

It is passed through a chopping machine and then is transferred to huge steam-jacketed open kettles, where the lard is slowly tried out of the leaf fat. There is an agitator in each kettle which looks something like the "dasher" in your ice-cream freezer.

This dasher keeps the mass in constant motion, and soon you see the cream-colored liquid fat as it boils out of the leaf. The fat is raised to a temperature far above the boiling point of water, and therefore, any moisture in the leaf is driven off. The "cracklings" settle to the bottom and the clear fat is drained off and strained through a cloth as it passes to a cooling vat, from which it flows into the sterilized tin pails or into the cartons, where it is allowed to cool, and is then packed for shipment to you. Real leaf lard is a rich cream in color. It is always very firm and, because of its richness, is dry and flaky in appearance and has a crinkly surface. This waxy surface is produced by slow cooling and will be found only on open-kettle rendered lard. It is 100 per cent. pure leaf lard. Nothing has been added and nothing removed.

PRIME STEAM LARD.

Now to tell you about the other type of lard, known as prime steam or pure lard. All the fat other than the leaf is used in the preparation of this snowy white lard. The fat trimmings, or excess fat trimmed off the delicious hams, bacon and tender loins and fat backs, are carefully collected, washed and placed in huge, covered tanks. Live steam is then blown into the tanks, heating the fat to a very high temperature. The lard is thus extracted from the fat. The lard is thus extracted from the fat. The lard is thus extracted from the "cracklings" (which is the technical name for the residue or tissue which is left after the lard is removed).

The "cracklings" are allowed to settle and then the lard is piped to the huge scale tank, where it is weighed. From here it is pumped to the clarifying tank, where it passes through large filter presses. The lard is still very hot and all the moisture has been driven off, leaving 100 per cent. pure lard. All this time it is a fluid and is pumped through pipes from one tank to another. It is not permitted to "set" during the entire operation.

Pure lard is snowy white in color; it is not bleached—just filtered, and all the rich animal oil is in the lard, making it a very desirable fat for shortening, seasoning or frying purposes.

For an excellent pie crust use—

RECIPE NO. 1217

PIE CRUST.
3 tablespoons pure leaf lard.
2 cups pastry flour.
¾ teaspoon salt.
About ½ cup cold water.

Mix and sift the dry ingredients, cut in the leaf lard with a knife. Add the water and mix with a knife to a stiff dough; toss on a slightly floured board and divide. Roll out lower crust and line pie plate. Moisten rim with cold water. Roll out upper crust, trim, hold under cold water faucet just a minute, pop into a hot oven and bake about 45 minutes.

Another tempting dish is—

RECIPE NO. 1218
MARYLAND FRIED CHICKEN.
2 chickens.
3 tablespoons flour.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup pure leaf lard.
½ teaspoon pepper.

Clean and singe the two chickens. Cut in pieces for serving. Wash thoroughly in cold water. Drain, but do not wipe. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and coat thickly with flour. Put lard in a frying pan and when melted and hot add the chicken, a few pieces at a time (so as not too quickly to reduce the temperature of the lard) and cook slowly, turning frequently until chicken is tender and well browned. The time required being about 35 to 40 minutes. Serve with or without white sauce.

And doughnuts, exceptionally flavored, deliciously crisp and tender, can be made to please the whole family from the following recipe:

RECIPE NO. 1219
DOUGHNUTS.
3½ tablespoons pure leaf lard.
3 eggs.
1 cup sugar.
1 cup milk.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon cinnamon.
½ teaspoon nutmeg.
1 teaspoon salt.
About 4 cups pastry flour.

Cream lard and add ½ cup sugar. Beat eggs light, add remaining sugar and combine with creamed lard and sugar. Sift flour with the baking powder, salt and spices and add alternately with the milk. Turn out on a well-floured board, roll about ½ inch in thickness. Cut with a doughnut cutter, let stand for 5 minutes, then fry in deep leaf lard at a temperature between 360 to 370 degrees F. Drain on unglazed paper. When cold roll in powdered sugar.

HUGHES TO HELP MINERS FIGHT "MENTAL SLAVERY"

Wheeling, W. Va., May 22 (A.P.)—Charles Evans Hughes, former Secretary of State, has offered his services to the United Mine Workers of America in fighting a temporary writ of injunction granted by Judge William E. Baker in United States District Court here Tuesday, in which "peaceful persuasion" methods in unionization are forbidden, according to Attorney T. C. Townsend of Charleston, chief of West Virginia counsel for the union.

Attorney Townsend declared the miners' union regarded the new restraining order as "enslavement to the human mind," in which view Mr. Hughes concurred.

FULLER GIVES TROPHY FOR QUINCY MARATHON

A silver shield, to be given as first prize in the Tercentenary marathon next month in connection with the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Quincy, was today donated by Governor Fuller to the Italian-American Athletic Association of the Granite City.

GARY RAPS WAR AS A 'SCOURGE ON BUSINESS'

Steel Man Also Scores High Taxes and Antagonistic Stand of Congress

New York, May 22 (I.N.S.)—Higher taxes, political antagonisms, high living costs and continuing effects of war were seen today by Elbert H. Gary as "diseases affecting business."

Against these disadvantages, he told the American Iron and Steel Institute in its annual meeting here, were the more than balancing factors of an administration "disposed to aid all the people," and the advantages of a good citizenry in a land of natural wealth.

As chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation and president of the institute, Judge Gary's words were particularly addressed to the steel industry, but his message was of general import to business.

"The iron and steel business is prosperous, but not quite as good as it ought to be when one considers the underlying conditions of the country," he said.

"We of the iron and steel industry believe we are qualified to express the opinion that our business, although sound and enjoying better health than in other periods, is unnecessarily afflicted with impediments which may be classified as disease.

"The ill effects of wars are still in evidence and will be felt for many years to come, but it is hoped with lessening degree. The disease of war was infectious and became epidemic."

Discussing "political situations," he deplored an "attitude inimical to the best interests of the people" on the part of members of Congress. He assailed high taxes and indorsed President Coolidge's expressed views on tax reductions, particularly hitting at income and inheritance taxes.

ARMS PARLEY LISTS RUSSIA AS OUTLAW

Geneva, May 22 (I.N.S.)—Russia was placed in the light of outlaw territory by the general commission of the arms control conference today.

The general commission approved the French proposal to grant exemption to all countries bordering Russia from the publicity required of other nations on manufacture and traffic in arms. The provision will hold as long as Russia refuses to become a party to the arms traffic convention.

Theodore E. Burton of the American delegation approved the proposal.

Who wants to see "Chickie" free of charge? Don't all speak at once!

If you are one of the many who would like to see Lorin the movies next Wednesday afternoon or evening, just shoot in a clever "last line" for today's limerick and a pair of best orchestra seats for Gordon's Washington Street Olympia Theatre or Gordon's Capitol Theatre, Commonwealth avenue, Allston, will be awarded to you.

The sensational story of a Boston flapper," which ran serially in the Boston Evening American, is now being shown as a movie to crowded houses at Gordon's Washington Street Olympia Theatre with Dorothy McKaile in the title role.

Because of the tremendous crowds that have packed this theatre this week the management has decided to continue the picture all next week and also to show it at the Capitol Theatre, which is one of the most modern motion picture houses in New England, with a seating capacity of nearly 2,000.

The all-star cast participating in the film version of this wonderful story of a Boston girl and her daily troubles includes Jack Mulhall, who plays opposite "Chickie," Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman and Olive Tell.

The special music score which was written for this snappy picture will be played at the Capitol Theatre by a full orchestra, as well as at the Washington Street Olympia. Those who followed the romantic adventures of "Chickie" in the columns of the Boston Evening American will be thrilled when they witness the movie. Here is your chance, folks, to see this fine picture without cost.

Jinglers whose clever "last lines" in Limerick No. 77 won tickets for Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus, which opens a week's engagement at Andrew square, South Boston, grounds next Monday, are as follows:

FLAPPER QUEEN PINS JOY RIDE ON OLYMPIA

Songster Denies She Boasted of Staying Out With 'Sheik' Johnny Until 11 P. M.

By MAXINE McBRIDE.

New Haven (Ct.), May 22.—It was Mrs. Mollie Lombardi, pert, pretty and powerful, who swept into the witness box like a breezy gust of life—a youth before the spent sob hearted girl that was Olympia Maeri, and proved herself not only the "surprise witness" of the trial but the only witness, man or woman, before whom the girl mother has broken down completely.

One trip had Olympia mate to the witness stand, but trembling and white-faced she had held resolutely to her fast-ebbing strength, and even the fluttering wisp of a handkerchief with which she frequently combed her eyes betokened the gradual crumbling away of her courage.

But when Little Molly coaxed Olympia stepped a trifle up to the stand, smiled jingling bobbed head wisely high, and the very air ballroom of careless flapper youth everything that is now in Olympia the little songster buried her head in her arms and sobbed as if her heart would break.

CHEERED FALLEN GIRL.

Less sure is perfect at home in the witness stand as if she were sitting behind the five and ten cent counter where Sheik Bagnano used to loiter in his daily pilgrimages to the store's "pin pan alley." Little Molly fluffed out her bobbed hair, wriggled out of her smart wrap around coat and gazed over the courtroom. Flapper Queen of all she surveyed.

Readily Little Molly testified that Olympia went to bed on her coming in hopes of encountering the "sheik" at one of his visits to the music counter. She was almost always too busy with customers to answer Olympia's daily question: "Have you seen Johnny or you know where he is?" she testified. Besides she was rather uncertain about speaking to Olympia now that rumor had it that the young girl was a mother.

But she told the court, she said to Olympia: "You have no cause for shame and both could be caught the same way I were" and in a cure less off hand fashion she greeted Olympia the time that Johnny was at all the music counter a call.

Out of the tail of her eyes Molly showed that she saw Olympia on counter her brother Joe. On store one day saw her waver uncertain about speaking to her own brother over her family had cast her off and she des rified the scene in which Olympia finally mustered up courage and went up to Joe and asked him to be the first to be of the family who had spoken to the girl mother for weeks.

"She had an ashamed look," declared Mollie. "as if she didn't know whether Joe would speak to her or not."

That was the last flick of the look. For it was after Ellen Olympia could hear her sobbing violently. The songster had her head in her arms and on a stone of her shoulders and flushed face with tears.

Gradually Olympia gained control of herself. In the trial Mollie's testimony had drawn to a close, the young girl lifted a tear-stained face and confronted Molly, who held a strong eyes as her counsel stood as quiet by off the stand as she said mounted.

The big surprise that Ittie Molly carefully offered to the court in her story was that Olympia had told her one morning over the counter, that she had been out with Johnny and "hadn't gotten in till 11 o'clock."

For that confession it did the trial a strange take the stand in the wake of her young cousin, like a ghost character paving in same dress which at other seen lighter vein, and steadily and ably upset the deep of the truth of the "seven orders, parade with Johnny" of which Molly had told.

ARGUMENTS BEGIN.

The swift, moving exchange of the two young girls on the stand missed a pulse and drew from court people to the opening of the attorneys' arguments.

"Sheik," said Mollie, "was the best looking fellow I ever saw. He was the part in the little opera singer's drama and the last of these to send Joe was to be witness against him spoken of part and salaried.

The lights of the drama have died down from the speakers' voices are hushed and the stout, middle-aged people in

With BULLARD in the WORLD WAR

A. E. F. Commander's Own Intimate Story of Dark Days and Deeds of Valor When the Yanks Went to France

AS THESE are personal memoirs of Experiences, the pronoun "I" can never be out of sight. I am not offering these memories as absolute fact, but as my impression and belief at the time. —R. L. BULLARD.

IN the initial chapters of his memoirs, General Bullard described the personality of his chief, General Pershing—"holding the confidence of his subordinates by his efficiency, but nowhere arousing enthusiasm." He told, too, of the plan under which American soldiers were schooled in France, taught the new science of war from the rudiments and discarding everything they had learned before. Also he dwelt briefly on the trouble they had getting action in Washington, while the French fumed. Speaking of the French generals, he said: "Marshal Foch they admire for his courage, genius and world prestige; but Petain they love—he knew their hearts."

Continuing General Bullard told of the marvellous organization built up by the Americans in France, one that exacted the wonder and admiration of the greatest military minds of the world.

The thrilling narrative continues today, and every week day in the Boston Evening American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Every instalment holds the same breathless interest. You will want to read every one of them.

COMING in contact with the French, living with them, eating with them, there quickly came to light the French hope that the Americans would recruit, simply recruit, the French armies. The French division commander suggested this to me.

"Will you [illegible]" he asked.

"That," I answered, "is a question far above me, a question

MYSTERY WOMAN IN SHEPHERD CASE

Men to Enter Sacred Precincts of Northfield Seminary

YANKS PREPARING TO SHOW WAR METTLE

"The United States will put its troops on the battle front when it shall have formed an army worthy of the American people." This was the statement made by General Pershing to the French critics angered at what they erroneously believed our delay in entering the battle lines. This layout shows American troops in France in training for those victories of arms which startled the world and raised the failing morale of the Allied troops. At top is shown American doughboys practicing "going over the top." Two figures below depict the American hand grenade thrower learning to toss bombs with accuracy. Sketch at right depicts a Yank artilleryman firing a "soixante-quinze."

GIRLS MAY YET WEAR KNICKERS

Resignation of Teachers Reveal Others Favor Modifying Old Traditions

Northfield, May 22.—Dwight Moody, the evangelist, would never have been able to stand up under the second upheaval that struck Northfield Seminary which he founded many years ago.

This was the report that not only has dancing come to stay, but that the girls may have men partners at the social affairs—and still more may even wear knickers.

Stripping details by W. R. Moody, president of Northfield Seminary, and by Charles E. Dickerson, principal of the school that the fourteen instructors who will leave the seminary this year are doing so because they are at odds with the management of the board of trustees, set at rest today the fact that trouble was stirred this quiet little town as never before.

ONLY 14 GOING.

We have about forty teachers here and only fourteen of them are going," said the son of the late evangelist and president of the school. "Nine of them are going because of old age and with us. Approximately the number leave as every year for various reasons. Most of them feel like [illegible] into public school work. It is just our annual turn over."

Principal Dickerson emphatically declared that any reports that his resignation was caused by friction with the school authorities "over school policies" or that he had made any statement to that effect "were, then, up and down."

shortly before luncheon for a little nap.

After a few practice spins on the Stadium track Nurmi, pronounced one of the fastest he ever saw here, Through Jake Mikkola Nurmi wishes it understood that this is to be no practice event, but one in which he will give his very best in order to establish a new record.

Nurmi is not at all nervous. He slept last night—as well as he ever did in his life—at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mikkola, No. 25 Hammond street Cambridge.

Retiring at 10 o'clock, Nurmi arose about 7 today. He did some up exercises and then had his breakfast.

The great Finn had the following menu:

Fruit cocktail, consisting of orange grape fruit, pineapple and cherries.
One soft boiled egg.
Small dish of oatmeal, cooked Finnish style (well done).
One glass of milk.
One cup of coffee.

Paavo then rested strongly the streets of the bridge [illegible] ing over Soldiers Field and trot. Previous to leaving the to exercise the Finnish marvel, the matter of getting his lunch in the hands of Mrs. Mikkola.

Late in the afternoon he left the Locker Building at Harvard Stadium with Coach Lauri Mikkola, of Harvard University.

Nurmi said he was five pounds under weight.

He then listened to dire reports from New York which wrecked him with being disgusted with the way he has been treated in the country. He declared that he had nothing but praise for the American sporting public and that he had been treated royally ever since he landed on these shores.

He also denied that he had said that after he left for home next week, he would never return. He stated that he didn't know if it would ever be possible for him to come back but that if it were he would be only too glad to pay another visit to America.

Other than for a small reserved section with 5,000 seats admission will be free to the public. The reserved seats are also free, but are only for Harvard and B. A. A. men.

Nurmi's world's record for one mile is 4m. 10 2-5s. He set this figure

JULIAN MEETS CLARK IN GO AT LYNN

Buddy Clark of Salem and Tony Julian of Brockton have finished their training and both look remarkably fit and in good condition for their battle at the Casino A. C. Lynn tonight.

The fighters have agreed to weigh in at ringside but the scales will be placed at the Casino A. C. at 2 o'clock.

Clark says that his chief reason was the ease of his engagement when they met several weeks ago and he is confident he will not only win but he says he will knock out the Brockton fighter.

The semi-final between Charlie Costello of East Boston and Joe Rosa of Lynn is also almost assured [illegible] as both [illegible] is set at 8 o'clock.

'TWI' LEAGUE SEASON STARTS THIS EVENING

LYNN IS SCENE OF OPENER

Cornets and So. Boston Nines to Pry Lid Off at Barry Playground

By JOE CASHMAN.

The fourth season of the Greater Boston Twilight League opens this evening with the Lynn Cornets and the South Boston nine clashing on the Francis E Barry play grounds, Lynn, starting at six o'clock

All the pomp and ceremony that attends a big league opening will be in evidence and a capacity crowd is expected.

Mayor Harland A M'Phetres of Lynn will toss out the first ball and prominent State and city officials will be among the invited guests.

Both the contending nines have high hopes of a successful season and the battle each will put up to hop off on the right foot should be well worth witnessing. The pre-season record of each is impressive and the result of the opener should be in doubt right up to the finish.

Manager Newton of the South Boston club announced today that he had signed up Jack M'Govern, formerly a catcher on the Abbot Worsted team, for backstop duty until "Mickey" Connors, his regular receiver, returns from the South.

The catching department has been the only worry of the Dorchester manager this Spring and now that he has secured an experienced back stop, he can see only fair sailing for his club

The second game of the season will be played tomorrow when Salem and Manchester meet in the New Hampshire city These two clubs will be starting their first year as members of the "Twi" circuit

TAD'S TIDBITS

By TAD

Can you remember when Mickey Walker, the welterweight champion, defended his title at the weight? If he ever did it must have been a long time ago, for boxing fans around town can't very well remember it

On Saturday afternoon Walker knocked out Leo Cooper in one round at San Francisco, but both boys were way above the welter limit. Walker made that match some months ago and stipulated that his opponent should not weigh less than 148 pounds. A few months before that he knocked out Bert Colma at Los Angeles in seven rounds, and he also stipulated that Colma should weigh above the welterweight limit. He took no chances with his little old West.

Here in the East Walker recently fought Mike McTigue and outpointed the latter. Had he knocked Mike out he would have been light heavyweight champion. Now on June 19 he means Harry Greb, and if he outpoints or knocks out Greb he will cop the middleweight championship.

Mickey Walker is no fool when it comes to making matches. He is a very careful young man. He laughs at Benny Leonard, saying that our Bennah retired from the ring because he was afraid to fight as a welterweight.

Leonard as we all know, could not make the lightweight limit and was forced to retire. He had been fighting for years as a welter, but when he faced a Walker match he retired absolutely. Walker has not retired, but he hasn't given anyone a chance at his title At that, he is a great little fighter.

Jack Reed's new Olympic Auditorium which is being erected in Los Angeles, Cal., will be finished early in July, and Jack writes that his first boxing show will be held there on July 15. Harry Pollok, who is general manager of the Auditorium, is arranging for the trade shows and for big attractions right now

Moe slipped over another winner yesterday. He sent in his jingle on Noah and the sweet baby ran his company bow legged. Today he moves to Belmont Park. He is taking a shot at one in the Metropolitan handicap and expects to see the puppy bust out in front and stay there to the end. Cash in kick, $1996.67.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 61 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

A straight left arm in the back swing is never quite so straight as all that. We say straight, using the term mostly to distinguish between fairly straight arm against bent arm, as a half-opened jack-knife. The left arm is slightly curved when the top of the back swing is reached. If it is held rigidly straight the body in all probability will sway because the arm, seeking to give some, will be restrained, and your body will give instead. Swaying of the body will cause something not wanted to take place on the ball Often hooks and slices are traceable to body swaying. Also, a body sway encourages the effort to hit with the body instead of with the clubhead.

STRIBLING-CARPENTIER BOUT IS PLANNED

Michigan City, Ind., May 22—Plans for a fight between Georges Carpentier and young Stribling, to be held at Macon, Ga., in September or October were made known here today with the announcement of Floyd Fitzsimmons, boxing and wrestling promoter, that he had cabled Jack Dempsey, now in France, to offer Carpentier a $30,000 guarantee for the bout.

Fitzsimmons also asked Dempsey to discuss with Firpo his coming here for July 4 or Labor Day to meet an opponent, as yet undecided upon.

JACK SHARKEY RISKS $7,500 IN BOUT WITH COOK

LEGION PURSE IN AIR

Sharkey Must Beat Australian to Keep the Match With Maloney

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY will take a $7,500 gamble when he battles George Cook, Australian heavyweight, in a ten-round bout at the Commercial A. C. show at Mechanics Building on Monday night. This is the amount Promoter Sharkey has been guaranteed for his match with Jim Maloney at the Cross-Up-Fisher Post show at Braves Field on June 5. If Cook should put Sharkey over or latter can kiss good bye to the $7,500 the Legion promoters have contracted to pay him.

Jack Conway

The Sharkey-Cook bout would never have been made a reality if Manager Jimmy Bigley of the aforesaid latter Maloney opponent were agreed that Sharkey should battle Sailor Mont gomery again, and that Maloney should take on Knight at the Legion carnival.

Bigley then agreed for the Cook match, some of those persons back of the Legion show didn't approve of a double windup. They wanted to see Sharkey pitted against Maloney. There ensued long conferences and finally the match was made.

Sharkey very naturally would like to have been released from his contract to box Cook. The Commercial A. C. wouldn't consent to such a move and so Jack will have to take his $7,500 gamble or Maloney.

For the Cook bout Sharkey is receiving a $5,000 guarantee with the privilege of getting 60 per cent of the receipts. Cook will be paid 25 per cent of the gate.

PHIL FLANAGAN of Malden, national 118-pound champion and one of the leading boxers to start as a pro when he cashes in Alec Pelkey, Providence Matthews boy.

In the semi-final Lew Fox will make his debut here when Buck Astor, welterweight champion of the South who hails from Georgia, will box Tom Smith of Lawrence. Astor has been here on a number of occasions.

THE Harry Greb-Pat McCarthy bout scheduled for tonight by the Suffolk A. A. has been called off. It was announced that McCarthy had injured his back. A postponement was then announced, but this was not positive. Promoter Dan Bowd has on Monday night a promise that he can have Greb for the match. It is expected that a report one way or the other during the week.

Meet Me
Round-the-Corner

There's a Difference

This year men's hats have more brim and women's less. They've bobbed the brim on women's hats and put it on the men's.

Today a Brim Developer for a man is more popular than a bust developer for a woman.

Women are trying to reduce their shape to angles, and men are running to Round Corners.

That's why we have introduced "Round the Corner"—it has a wide brim, a Round Corner, a FANCY BAND—and everything.

LAST NIGHT ON THE AIR

There were enough local features on the air last night to please even the most critical fan. While it [illegible] a good night for trying for stations, there was no need for it. For instance where would one find anything better in the line of orchestral music than WEEI's relaying of Sodero's Orchestra from the New York studio? I listened to this for some time, and particularly enjoyed the piano concerto number by Abram Ellstein. Where Hans Barth was the soloist. WEEI's nine o'clock feature was also relayed from New York, and was orchestral in nature.

The shepard organization was heard from three different stations. First I booked on to WEAN in Providence, and listened to an excellent outdoor orchestral concert by the Brown University Orchestra. This came direct from the Brown Campus. From WNAB on 250 meters was heard the broadcast from Copley Plaza Hotel of the Rose Croix [illegible] banquet of the Knights of Columbus. This affair was well given, and not only consisted of several fine addresses, but also some extra good talent in the musical line. The big 500 watter at WNAC gave us a super-concert furnished by the Massachusetts Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The Allston Post Band gave a fine account of itself in a well varied program. Probably the most impressive feature of this broadcast, was the short address by Governor Fuller, in which he discussed "Poppy Day." In the course of his remarks he quoted the famous poem "In Flanders Fields."

Local fans had the opportunity last night of hearing through WBZ the opening of a series of summer outdoor concerts to be [illegible] United States Marine Band. This broadcast according to the announcer at Washington, came from a point about 500 feet from the huge Washington Monument [illegible] the land [illegible] holds forth.

There was a very good [illegible] to [illegible] WEIN, which I picked up at 8:40. She was so loud that I wanted to turn her down, but when the announcer [illegible] the [illegible] so fast [illegible] useless to try [illegible] would [illegible] If the WEIN announcer [illegible] some of those [illegible] would [illegible] better for the ear.

Receiving conditions were excellent. There was scarcely any static, and plenty of stations could be heard. Fading was noticeable on several stations, but on the most of them could be heard. The [illegible] quality of [illegible] programs, however, [illegible] totally unsatisfactory. There was a very good [illegible] to [illegible]

Marion Davies' Greatest Role

Marion Davies has played many great parts in her career as a motion picture star—such roles as Mary Tudor in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Pat" O'Day in "Little Old New York" and Janice Meredith in "Janice Meredith." But Mamie in "Zander the Great" is the greatest.

of policy with which I have nothing to do, the business of the commander-in-chief, General Pershing."

When a few days later I told General Pershing of the question of the French division commander, without waiting for me to state what answer I had given he interrupted sharply, vehemently: "And what did you say?" I told him. "You answered right," he said, showing a strange amount of feeling. This at the time I accounted for by his statement given out to the French public some three months ago as his headquarters were removing from Paris to Chaumont:

"The United States will put its troops on the battlefront when it shall have formed an army worthy of the American people."

His manner now, I thought, only retold his purpose—to form an army worthy of the American people and to have it under American command. To this he was wedded and to this he stuck to the end. His effor of troops after the German drive of 1918 was temporary to meet the crisis. He regained his troops under American command as soon as the crisis was passed

Criticism From the French

By the end of October, eight months after our declaration of war and four months after our first troops reached France, General Pershing, still having sent no American troops into line against the enemy, the French impatience to see them there developed into criticism and, I was told, even into intrigue in the United States against Pershing. This was added to by criticism and hostility against Pershing by American newspaper men in France, who, of course, wanted to see things lively and have sensations which they were not getting under Pershing's systematic, calm method of proceeding to train an organization. This went so far as to produce even some little talk at the time about Pershing a being relieved of command.

"December 23 (diary). Back in the 1st Division with which I came over. Our commander-in-chief had told, early in December, that he might call for me to take command of this division at any moment. It turned out as he said. On December 1 I was looking at some maneuvers (in General Sibert's division) and was informed that General Sibert had been ordered away. I felt that this meant my assignment, and so it turned out. I took command here on December 14, and General Sibert departed for the United States. Since that day I've been going at a high rate of speed. Every one and every thing are working under heavy pressure."

After his relief and before his departure to the United States I did not see General Sibert and do not know how he then felt toward me. In meeting since the war he has shown no ill feeling. In all I had given no cause for any. In response to the inquiry, through the War Department, of his friends as to why he had been relieved, I heard some weeks later that General Pershing had answered, "In the interests of greater efficiency."

Failures Among Our Officers

Making no pretentions to modesty, I held myself competent as any other American officer in sight that might have received command of this division, which it was now understood was to be the first and representative American division to go against the enemy.

I, nevertheless, felt no ever-confidence in taking command of this division. Experience had taught me that in the absence of opportunity for the exercise of higher command, failures are sure, but that notwithstanding this our government and our people made no allowance for this lack of opportunity, in the past insisting upon instant relentless relief from command for an officer if he failed. In a conversation with our commander-in-chief October 29 1917, "I learn (diary) that two of our general officers now in charge of important duties in our organization here in France are already showing themselves unable to meet the demands made upon them. Failing. So soon. Surely many of us will fail. And these two men not long ago spoke to me with so much self-confidence, one as though he expected promotion to higher command and hoped to have me serve under him. So it goes, a man can never judge himself." This incident scared me. It made me make up my mind not to delude myself with my own weakness, to know that another would never look at me or my work with the lenient, gentle eye of myself to bear in mind that "Every way of a man seemeth right unto himself."

Hearing that I was to command a division, wrote, "November 3, 1917 (diary), I am trying hard to prepare myself to command it I feel that it is to be a very difficult thing." And (diary), "November 8, 1917. Alas! Failures are coming thick and fast in this declared, yet, on our part, non-existent war. I wonder if I am to be among the number. Not if live personal effort will prevent it. Yet I do not believe that I have the ability to make good; I feel that I am short on knowing how. But here's starting to learn. Hard work from now on, all day and a large part of the night."

In talking with me about my assignment to command the 1st Division, General Pershing himself (diary, December 8, 1917), "was very urgent about being an optimist over conditions existing and referred to President Wilson as his model in this matter. . . . He said nothing to indicate any speeding up to place our troops in campaign, except that he would give me command of the 1st Division in time for me to learn it and give me some practice with it before sending us to real action—war. From this I judge that he is thinking of the spring at furthest as a beginning for our troops. I cannot think that he, with all his ambition to succeed is going to risk failure by allowing himself to be drawn into action until he is fully ready."

Chapter VIII.—Training for Battle

The first thing that impressed itself in our practical training beside our Allies was the immense emphasis placed by them upon purely trench warfare, to which alone, for practically two years and a half, they had been accustomed. They seemed never to think that it would be possible to pass from trench to open warfare; they emphasized nothing put living and fighting in the trenches.

Another difficulty in the way of putting the American idea into effect was a lack at first of spaces available for drills, maneuvers and practices. The American habit and need of room everywhere and for everything was greater and stronger than the Frenchmen's. But we soon obtained larger drill and practice spaces, although in the end we learned in this, as we also learned in the matter of fuel, to adapt ourselves to less than we ever at home imagined would suffice.

The rifle is American. The infantry of the 1st Division in its training area at Gondrecourt, no great distance from St. Mihiel, concerned itself at once with rifle ranges for practice in individual shooting. The fine 47th French Chasseurs beside us began to talk to us about the use of the hand grenade and the forging of trenches and accustoming ourselves to the use of the gas mask asserting in substance that there was little use in warfare for the individual rifle or pistol, that the artillery would do all the shooting for the infantry and that the infantryman would advance with his gun slung over his shoulder and using grenades against machine-gun nests. Without gainsaying our very agreeable and tactful instructors, we adhered to our individual rifle shooting and learned all their grenade throwing and gun work also. This had to be done very carefully, because it is no exaggeration to say that the whole French mind (and I was informed, also the English mind) was fastened upon the subject of trench warfare. It seems that what was the experience of the 1st Division in its training with the French, our immediately succeeding American divisions also encountered with both the French and the English. It is truly remarkable that with the Americans' fixed ideas of open fighting, these American divisions should have been able, as they were able, to serve and train alongside of British and French troops without friction and especially so toward the British, because while the French are always well known for great tact and consideration, the British are considered a little more blunt and informal in its pressing their ideas. Both French and British, too, at this time believed the Americans practically without any military training. They felt that once in contact with the enemy we would fall an easy prey to the latter's greater special skill.

Commanders Chafe at Schooling Delay

Very little time was lost in the beginning of the practical field instruction of the American troops. But that instruction in the case of the first two or three divisions that arrived in France was considerably interfered with by the necessity of taking from these divisions many officers and men for the purpose of forming the framework of the great American Expeditionary Force in France. With some division and subordinate commanders this necessity was not appreciated. They seemed to think that the American Expeditionary Force could come over by whole units, its organization be fully foreseen before departure from the United States and that their units sole aim and sole end was to get at once in contact with the enemy.

Fortunately when General Pershing moved his headquarters from Paris in August or September of 1917 he publicly announced that the American troops would not go against the enemy until the American Expeditionary Force had assembled a strength of [illegible] that would be worthy of the United States in France. I remember well my amazement at the word of the American commander in chief in Paris that had upon me, and that should have had upon other officers a greater effect. It was a most opportune statement, worthy of a great man.

MY ROMANTIC HUSBAND

A Sequel to "Ways of a Husband"

By Anne Lisle

AS Matt quavered his question I realized that he still cared for Brooke. I wondered if this might be the means of freeing Jim—if it only indicated how dangerous a hold Brooke De Courcy has on the man who [illegible] her spell.

[illegible] eagerness to hear one word that would justify Brooke De Courcy was pathetic. Obviously he had not been able to forget Brooke any more than he had been able to forgive her. It was evident that Ralph Lacy understood Matt's attitude and predicament, for he walked across the Tremaine living-room and took his stand at Matt's side as he said:

"I don't believe Brooke De Courcy would ever subject any one to grave personal danger. She couldn't do it. It's not in her. But that is no reason she should put herself to the test. Because of watching her, I guess. She could break a heart with out a flicker of an eyelash. On the other hand, it looks as if her brother Barry has another kind of mania. He isn't obsessed with self. He is determined to get out of the way as quickly as possible all who come between him and the financial success he is after. And he thinks Brooke can help give it to him. She is [illegible] as I see it."

"You're going too far, Lacy," cried Pennington good-naturedly. "Don't take those folks out from a bit of blue glass and a stolen handkerchief. Brooke and Barry are hand in glove. He may be ready to go a little further than she is. He may give her a jolt now and then. But they go in the same boat—enlisted to keep Lucie out of our show or to throw such a scare into us that we won't dare open without making terms with them."

"Do you think Brooke is same —though unprincipled? [illegible] broke [illegible]."

"Sure thing!" chorused Johnny and Bert.

"But why should a sane person enter into a plot that has so many silly angles?" asked Ralph. "I'm dead sure that only a person without power to motivate his acts would have fallen away over here to drop and not said boo! [illegible]

"Instead of covering his tracks—instead of trying to hide who sent Lucie the stuff that doped her—our enemy is friendly enough to play a regular monkey trick by coming [illegible] to show us [illegible] awake. Those [illegible] are [illegible] I [illegible] said.

[illegible] Brooke and [illegible] to [illegible] as she [illegible] save to do tricks wasn't in [illegible] newspaper, we are likely to [illegible] are really accomplishing."

They don't come out in the open about the things they don't want to wise us to," laughed Johnny

"You bet they don't!" agreed Bert.

"Still I think there is something in what Lacy says," began Matt, only to be interrupted by Frothingham at his most pompous and in his most definitely stage-directing manner.

"The idea is to open the Revue next week—not to postpone again. We want to protect Lucie. We can't do that if we get side tracked by any notions that Brooke isn't fighting to a finish."

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: [illegible]

DEAR M[illegible]: [illegible]

DON'T [illegible]

Pale and dry like an old wine!

THE minute you break the golden seal of the aristocratic bottle and pour a bit of "Canada Dry" slowly down the side of a thin-edged glass, as a connoisseur would pour a glass of fine old wine, you will know that here, at last, is real ginger ale.

Hold it to the light! See how clear it is! How it gleams and sparkles! The abounding life and vitality of it! The pale, champagne-like "dryness" and color!

And then—taste it! Here is a revelation in ginger ale quality—a delicate, alluring flavor that intrigues your taste—a flavor unlike that of any other ginger ale you have ever tasted!

Try it soon. In purity—in quality—in flavor it is indeed "The Champagne of Ginger Ales."

Three-Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

MOST of us know whether it's fair or foul weather as soon as we open our eyes in the morning. Not so Ignacio Sanchez. He has to get up and look out of the window to find out whether he is to wear his poncho or not. Ignacio is a native of Tamuco, Chile, and there are no people in the world who are more particular about their clothes.

Each day that the sun shines, Ignacio puts on the dress of the town crier until persistently awake you to the fact that the day is breaking. He will stand before your window and bellow forth the fact, until it has forced its way into your consciousness.

Dressed in his poncho and scarf, muffled to the very chin, he goes on his way with his staff and flickering lantern, serenely oblivious to the unpleasant thoughts you are entertaining about him.

Temuco is as strange a place as this custom would lead one to believe. Its low, typically Spanish houses with their iron balconies and dull red tiles are dotted everywhere with strange spires and towers that give it a ghostly aspect. And, in spite of the fact that they are awakened so early, you will find four of the natives on the street by the time the sun is really high in the heavens. The women sit about on their balconies, chatting in loud, raucous voices. Indolence is the very spirit of the land.

When the day does finally come to life, one sees through the village and sees the picturesque women on [illegible] market square. [illegible] the shops. The [illegible] about on their ponies in short ponchos of any colors and elaborate jackets. Their feet boast huge spurs that look quite unnecessary and out of place.

This colorful, clean little town is quite modern in many respects. It has its telegraph and telephone and radios and camera-as-you-wait men. It is a strange combination of the old and the new and one can readily understand this when one wanders a short way out of the town and comes upon old Indian settlements where the medicine post still holds its place of honor before the door and the huts are made of young trees, twigs and brush. But of all its little inconsistencies, the habit of waking the town at dawn would perhaps strike us as the most unnecessary and unpleasant one.

DAILY SHORT STORY

FINISHING the steep incline the girl reached the top of the tall rocks [illegible] and [illegible] into the water. [illegible] was computing [illegible] far from human ears she gave free vent to her pent up feelings.

Standing at the very crest of the incline she twisted her slender hands together behind her back and [illegible] and marvel of marvels, [illegible] things which had so greatly [illegible] her seemed swept away in an instant. Turning [illegible] began the [illegible] descent with a strange joy in [illegible] Sorrow was [illegible] Why, she seemed to sense instantly that the whole complex thing was already straightened out and she need but wait patiently for confirmation of that fact.

"Land sakes, Miriam, where have you been?" her mother spoke sharply to conceal the fact that she had been very anxious for no one knew better than she what it had meant to her daughter to have Trent elope with the pale-faced, henna-haired dancing instructress. She was amazed at her daughter's happy tone.

A Little Walk

"Oh, I just went for a little walk out to Stony Point."

"Stony Point! Why, that's a terrible [illegible] hard walk from here; sure's you didn't climb—"

"To the very top," finished the girl.

"And what did you do that for, child?"

"Just to have a confidential chat with old Stony."

"Chat! Up there, miles from a living——" She eyed her daughter in alarm, which changed at once to gladness as she noted Miriam's cheerful mood.

"And what did Stony tell you?

"Well, I don't remember his exact words, if there were any. I suppose a psycho-analyst would glibly reel off words about thought fixation—concentration after fatigue——"

"Well, I'm glad 'Stony' has such good common-sense, dear. I wonder if he could tell me how I'm going to get all of these preserves put up before Sunday?"

"I'll save you a long walk by telling you, myself. I'm going to help you."

Elopers Return

In a fortnight the elopers were back.

Miriam congratulated Trent warmly. She had not dreamed that it could be so easy to shake the hand of her schoolday sweetheart and tell him she was glad that he was happy. He looked at her sharply, wonderingly.

"It seems to me you take it awfully easily," he ventured, trying desperately to appear nonchalant, his pride had received a mighty blow.

"Why, Walt," she returned evenly, "did you expect that I would dutifully die because you had decided to marry someone other than myself? I'm glad, very glad, that you found out in time it was not me that you wanted."

"See here" he broke in savagely, "I won't mince words. I've made a terrible blunder, it hasn't taken me long to find that out. I don't want a puff ball for a wife and she doesn't want a 'clod' as she has already been kind enough to call me. We've both made an awful mistake. Dot was furious at the idea of returning here and she thought that I had enough money to live in the city—says she simply won't live among this 'Main Street' bunch; claims one of her reasons for marrying me was to break away from here!"

"That's too bad," soothed Miriam. "Of course, that's just a sort of readjustment taking place in your minds; you'll get over it very soon. I'm sure."

Near Miriam's Home

The two were standing on the walk not far from Miriam's home. She felt that many prying eyes were upon her—she dare not walk away abruptly for she understood, only too well, what Trent's wife meant by the "Main Street" bunch—not that Miriam didn't love them, after all; still, she knew what they were saying about one Miriam, who had been dropped by her childhood sweetheart for a "cute Little blonde with no brains."

Suddenly [illegible] grasped her hand in a grip that hurt.

"Miriam," he breathed, "It's you I love—God knows how I could ever have been so blind

"Stop" she commanded, instantly. "Trent I have always had the highest opinion of you, you have ever been fair and manly—remember you are no longer free to tell me of your love

"M[illegible]" he pleaded. She could see that in a moment the situation was going to be impossible.

"What shall I do, Oh, tell me, little sweetheart, what shall I do?" he almost sobbed. In a moment of inspiration she faced him squarely.

"Ask Stony," she said, then turned and hurried away. He watched her with a feeling that everything desirable in life was leaving him.

Because he was a man it took him a long time to understand her cryptic instructions to "ask Stony." Eventually, however he vaguely caught the idea. One day Miriam saw him go past the house in the direction of the ocean road; her heart gave a mighty leap.

She locked herself in the pleasant little room upstairs and from this place of vantage finally made out the man standing far off upon the hill. When she saw the changed look upon his face as he repassed the house several hours later she knew that Stony had indeed while away to him

Ran Away Again

Whether or [illegible] did is a matter for conje[illegible] young wife until she [illegible] the Manor's son.

At last after [illegible] legal delays [illegible] hand along the [illegible] enough that they [illegible] more perfe[illegible] hoped for a [illegible] Stony they were disappointed this time, he had no message [illegible] perhaps it was because th[illegible] lovers gave him no chance to [illegible] heard

Twenty-two years later [illegible] passed the rocky promontory [illegible] Elizabeth, four, Ann, eight, Jack, nine, and Margaret, eleven. She was lonely, for all of the other five children had grown up and left home she put down her bundle of wash and looked toward the top of Stony.

"Damn" she said slightly.

"Ma," enquired Ann, in childish mystification, "Why is it that you and Pa always stop and swear when you look up at that hill?"

"Never mind," replied Miriam, shortly, wiping her forehead with the back of her sleeve and stooping over to pick up the basket."

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury.

THERE are so many unhappy marriages nowadays that some women won't marry a divorced man unless he brings references.

AND any wife who lays her husband off isn't liable to put in a good word for him.

SHE figures that if he was no use to her he couldn't be any good to anybody else.

AFTER a dame spends three or four years breaking a husband in she doesn't want some other women to get the benefit of her work.

MEN are born, but husbands are made.

AND a lot of them should be prevented.

A COOK can't go from one family to another without references, so why should a husband?

SOME women are more particular about the people they hire than they are about the ones they marry.

A COOK only inhabits the kitchen, but a husband wanders all over the house.

THE average girl figures that if a divorced man was any good he wouldn't be divorced.

THERE'D be a whole lot more happier marriages if the wives could get a guarantee with every man.

BUT the husbands you get nowadays you've got to take as is.

OF course a bride can ring up her husband's last wife and get a few suggestions.

THIS will be a great help to her in running him.

IF he likes prunes for breakfast she can find this out and then train him to eat grape fruit.

EMANCIPATION

The emancipated woman must have a glorious existence—judging from the yves agent stuff. The four winds of heaven stir her bobbed hair; she is dependent upon no one for the comforts—much less the luxuries—of life.

On paper, it sounds fine. Life must be thrilling under such conditions. Freedom is quite an item in human aspirations, and these emancipated girls are on a diet of it.

The emancipated woman starts the day by being emancipated from slumber by an alarm clock.

With the freedom of the kitchen-ette, she prepares her own breakfast.

By nine o'clock she is at the office. She has a long morning free from restrictions.

Comes noon, and she goes out to luncheon.

She works all afternoon.

She goes home promptly.

She goes to bed early.

On the other hand, consider the unemancipated woman.

She gets up when she feels like it.

She spends most of the morning making herself, fresh and beautiful, or as fresh and beautiful as she can.

And all the rest of the day and evening she is amused, diverted and adored by men who have more time for that sort of thing because emancipated women are attending to business for them.

WINNING YOUR CHILD'S HEART

By Lucy Lowell

THEY'D been trying to get Jimmie off to Sunday school. And he sat in a corner, small and tight and defiant, a-glowering.

Mother glowered back. "Can't do a thing with him!" she wailed. "He's getting incorrigible. Pays no attention to what I say. I've TOLD him to GO—and he declares that he WON'T!"

"James," said Father, "get your hat and GO to church!"

"No, sir." The boy's lips trembled, but his chin raised.

"What's that?" Father positively thundered. "Young man, do you know what you're saying? I'll take you across my knee if you don't march. Now, GO!"

"No, sir!"

A visitor waded into the row. She looked at Father, stretched out in an easy chair, surrounded by papers and magazines, and plenty of "smokes," and at Mother, embroidering something pretty and useless.

"Listen, folks, do you go to church?"

They looked astonished. "Of course not! But it's different for the boy. He OUGHT to go. Oh, it probably wouldn't hurt us to go, either. But we just can't seem to get started, you know."

"But how can you expect your boy to like to do something that you're so indifferent about yourselves? If you think it's good for him to go to church, why can't you put yourselves out a little and set him an example?"

"Of course there's something in that," Mother admitted. "But when we tell him to GO we expect him to mind!"

Then the visitor asked if they'd ever thought of substituting "COME" for "GO."

She'd heard of a very great man and a most successful father who never said "Go" to his children. His word always was "COME."

The man, by the way, is John D. Rockefeller and it was his son, John D. Jr., who told the story about "COME" instead of "Go" in a lecture he gave during "Boys' Week" in New York city, not long ago.

"How about it, old man?" asked father presently. "Want to come to church with mother and me?"

"Really, father? Well, I am not against it, but—" Jimmie answered. And the visitor smiled.

THEY SEE A HAWK GOING DOWN THE PIKE

By Foxy Grandpa

I WAS standing at the desk of a hotel up in Michigan registering, when Bobby, who was at my elbow, said:

"Are there any rivers or lakes around here, Foxy Grandpa?"

"What do you want to do, young man?" asked the clerk smiling, "are you looking for fishing?"

"Yes, sir," replied Bobby eagerly. "Well," laughed the clerk, "you've come to the right place."

"Have I?" asked Bobby, his blue eyes dancing with pleasure.

"I'm here to tell you," continued the clerk, putting the pen which I handed back to him behind his ear and blotting the big register, "that right out here in the country a few miles from town is a stream with the finest pike in it you ever saw."

"Oh," murmured Bobby. "That's fine."

Bobby turned his big blue eyes up to me with such a wistful expression in them that I did not wait for him to ask me if we could go fishing, but quickly said:

"We'll try that this afternoon, Bobby. How about it? Have you your tackle ready?"

"Oh yes, sir," Bobby hastened to answer.

"That's an engagement then. Right after lunch."

Bobby could hardly wait until lunch and when the time for dessert came he said he didn't want any—so you may know how anxious he was to go fishing.

I hired a fast-flying flivver and out over the road we whizzed until we came to the small river to which the hotel clerk had directed us.

I stopped the driver and we hopped out and in a few minutes we were down on the bank of the stream and in another very few minutes Bobby's line was reeled out and his eyes were fixed on the end of his fishing pole.

We sat quietly for a moment, when, suddenly something gave his line an awful yank.

Bobby started to reel in but then turned sadly to me and with a shake of his head said:

"Got away. Must have been a big one."

Just then we saw a big hawk flit over our heads and much to our delight it alighted on a low branch overhanging the water very near us.

"Isn't he a big one?" I asked, as we admired the handsome bird.

"He's taking a chance being so near this water," mused Bunny.

I wondered why, but didn't say anything. But I soon found out what Bunny meant. For at that very moment, as the bird craned his neck to pick up a dainty luncheon of an insect which was buzzing on the surface of the water, what should jump out of the water but a great big fish.

That powerful fish gave a leap and a bound, and before our very eyes seized the hawk in his mouth and was just about to swallow him when Bobby swerved his fishing rod around quickly and struck the fish on the gills. The fish fell back into the water, dazed, and the poor, frightened bird fluttered off, cawing into the treetops.

"Pike are certainly vicious fish. I said after we had recovered from our surprise.

"They certainly are," agreed Bunny. "Wouldn't you think they'd stay under the water, where they belong? The next thing you know they'll be trying rabbit meat." And Bunny moved away from the river bank as he spoke.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

The cost of living is to come down, many experts predict.

My advice is that you do not bank on this.

* * *

An upward trend set in last July and continued with little let-up into the early part of this year. In February the advance was very slight. March broke even. April, however, brought a rather substantial decline. Analyzing the figures for the last three months, most of the experts have become convinced that the downward movement will continue during the second half of this year.

* * *

Well, when it comes to forecasting price movements, one man's guess is about as good as another's.

I, for one, question whether the expected downward movement will materialize to any considerable extent.

I believe that the complete returns for May will show a rise.

* * *

Is it not significant that Dun's weekly compilation has begun, for the first time in many weeks, to reveal more advances than declines in commodity prices?

It is worth noting, too, that Professor Fisher's carefully prepared compilation has shown quite pronounced weekly advances since the beginning of this month.

What are some of the influences which may prevent the widely predicted downward sweep?

In my opinion, business in the second half of 1925 promises to be more active than it has been during the first half.

Wages are not declining and are little likely to decline at all substantially.

Foreign buying of American products is likely to increase rather than decrease. The return of Britain and other countries to the gold standard is bound to have a beneficial effect upon our foreign trade.

With the arrival of new crops, wheat and other grain prices are sure to go lower; September wheat is quoted around $1.40 a bushel and December corn around 90 cents.

Money is little likely to become dear enough to have a depressing effect upon commodity prices, or, for that matter, upon security prices.

Financial and business sentiment unquestionably has lately improved and the effect of any broadening of ordering would be bullish on prices.

Stocks of goods have been on light that the recent downward movement caused very little trouble. The very fact that inventories are so light suggests that any upward movement of consequence would call cause sellers to stiffen their prices for most of them feel that they have been on the mercy of buyers quite long enough.

The general price level in the United States is fully 55 per cent. above the pre-war basis. My guess is in that it is quite as likely to rise above 60 per cent. as it is to fall below 50 per cent.

* * *

All things considered, those who exercise courage in making commitments promise to fare quite as well as those who act timidly.

STRAUS LOOKS FOR BUILDING INCREASE

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

S. W. Straus of S. W. Straus & Co. points out "that the luxury of yesterday is the necessity of today and that this is the secret of billions of dollars of building and rebuilding. We are only entering present era of building. Last year building and replacing called for expenditure of $7,750,000,000 and 1925 will probably witness a $8,000,000,000 program. This is in line with the New York's forecast printed in the Boston Evening American and which appeared at a time when many building men were declaring this year would show a falling off from the figures of 1924.

On reading a recent note by the writer on insurance libraries, calling attention to the fact that Boston boasts the world's best, Aurin F. Hill tells me that he presented the Boston Public Library about twenty years ago with the "Insurance Scrap Book." In this are to be found, he says, the best items concerning the men who were then paid $100,000 and less" a year for their services. "I saw what I thought would be of value as history," says Mr. Hill. "I do not know of any other work like it or similar to it."

John D. Ryan, builder and head of the Anaconda group, largely held in New England, hails from the West, but is a booster for our local Summers. His son, Allan Ryan, known in Wall street as "the fair-haired boy," also likes New England and has Summered annually for years down in Maine.

* * *

John D. Ryan, when asked what he thought of the possibilities of making big money in Wall street a while ago, replied: "I would rather be in the West developing water power, light and other things. There I know I could make 7 or 8 per cent. on my money, which would be entirely satisfactory."

Federal Trade Commissioner W. E. Humphrey outlines his conception of the government's business creed as follows:

I express the faith of the majority of the Commission when it is composed today, when I say:

We do not believe that success is a crime;

We do not believe that failure is a virtue;

We do not believe that wealth is presumptively wrong;

We do not believe that poverty is presumptively right.

We do not believe that industry, economy, honesty and brains should be penalized.

We do not believe that incompetency, extravagance, idleness, and inefficiency should be glorified.

We do not believe that big business and crooked business are synonymous.

True, we will give closer scrutiny to big business than to small business, because of its greater power for good or evil.

We believe that 90 per cent. of American business is honest.

We believe that 90 per cent. of American business is anxious to obey the law.

We want to help this 90 per cent. of honesty.

We want to control or destroy the 10 per cent. that is crooked.

TRADE STEADY, SAYS DUN'S

R. G. Dun & Co's. Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue will say regarding trade conditions in Boston:

The frequent complaints regarding business seem to be due more to the failure of the expected expansion to materialize than to an actual falling off in sales, for, though there have been several adverse factors in this district, other influences have served to maintain the total volume of transactions at close to last year's level.

Leather is slightly more active, but demand is mostly for the cheaper grades. There is a conservative demand for tanning materials, but prices hold up well.

Avril building reports from 28 Massachusetts cities show a gain of nearly 29 per cent over last April's record. Wholesale business in building lumber is quiet, but the cargo rate active. Quotations are lower. There is a fair call for hardwood flooring, and hard woods are moderately active, but prices rule low.

Automobile registrations show an increase of 14 per cent for the first three months of the year over those for the same period last year. Tires are selling actively.

New York Curb

New York Curb was higher: Electric Investors 53⅝, up ⅜; Goodyear Tire 30¼; Western Power 48, up 1; American Super-Power B 89¼, up ⅜; Standard Petroleum 26¾; Peerless 20; Pok Oil 25⅜, up ⅜; Buffalo General Electric 68⅝.

Liberty Bond Prices

Liberty bond prices (fractions in 32ds) were: 3½s, 101; 1st 4s, 102 bid, 2d 4s, 101.4 bid; 1st 4¼s, 102.8; 2d 4¼s, 101.27; 3d 4¼s, 101.25; 4th 4¼s, 102.19; Treasury 4s, 102.14; Treasury 4¼s, 106.8.

Criticism Vindicated

A Bay State Judge Justifies Protest of His Order by an Assistant District Attorney

It took courage of no mean order for Assistant District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell of Middlesex to protest in open court against an order of Judge Nelson P. Brown that all of the so-called "Brickbottom" liquor cases, resulting from the recent raid of Somerville's nesting place for thugs and thieves, murderers and bootleggers, must await final disposition until the Middlesex list had been cleared of all other liquor cases. Execution of this order would have delayed the punishment of all defendants found guilty in the "Brickbottom" cases until next Autumn.

Instead of denouncing his critic and shirking the criticism, Judge Nelson P. Brown, sitting in the Superior Criminal Court at Cambridge, examined the criticism and then sent for his critic and informed him that the Court had decided to revoke the order to which exception had been taken.

Both the courage of Assistant District Attorney Bushnell in publicly criticizing the Court and the common sense of Judge Brown in taking cognizance of the criticism and acting in its light call for commendation that the Boston Evening American is glad to give.

This newspaper commends the example here set by the Attorney of the people and by the Judge on the bench to the District Attorneys and to the Judges throughout the six New England States.

No judge is infallible and any judge laboring under an hallucination to the contrary is no longer qualified for service as a member of the people's judiciary.

More conscientious criticism, based upon the fact, brought in good faith and directed against judges and district attorneys and juries and lawyers—this to the end that the administration of justice may be improved and the scandal of the law's delay at least reduced—is a public duty of large importance.

What has happened at Cambridge in connection with the "Brickbottom" cases ought to have a quickening influence and a cleansing effect throughout this corner of the country.

It affords a heartening example of honest criticism, well directed by a fearless Assistant District Attorney, and quickly justified and rightly rewarded by a Bay State Judge big enough to admit his error and reverse his ruling.

Basic Laws of This Country

Every American Ought to Be Familiar With the Constitution

What do you know about the Constitution?

It is the supreme law of the land and we ought to be familiar with it.

From a recent pamphlet published by William H. Allen there has been prepared the following questions which may be of use to you in testing your knowledge of the Constitution:

What is meant by the term "Bill of Rights"?

If no candidate has received a majority, who elects a President?

Representatives are elected by popular vote. By what are Senators elected?

How many amendments are there to the Constitution, and what amendments were ratified during President Wilson's terms?

How is an amendment to the Constitution adopted?

Who is the present commander-in-chief of the United States army?

Could Congress, if it wished, punish bootleggers by slitting their ears?

What is the law by which Congress can get rid of an incompetent or disloyal Cabinet officer?

Can any State fix a standard of weights and measures within its own boundaries?

Had any woman voted for President before the adoption of the woman suffrage amendment?

Is it stated in the Constitution that all men are free and equal?

Can a person who was born in Canada and naturalized here twenty-one years ago be elected President?

Can a citizen be compelled to give military service in time of peace?

If a man is charged with treason can he be compelled to give testimony against himself?

Can a State restrict religious freedom within its borders?

Is the Declaration of Independence a part of the Constitution?

Has a citizen any rights except those specified in the Constitution?

Where must bills for raising revenue originate?

How does Congress overrule the President's veto?

What determines the number of Representatives from each State in the House?

Is the right to vote at twenty-one fixed by the Constitution?

May your house be searched under any circumstances without a warrant issued telling you why?

May your house be taken for use as a postoffice without just payment?

Is imprisonment for debt prohibited by the Constitution?

Who makes and who ratifies the treaties of the United States with other countries?

Our British Cousins

In Business They're Able and Cold

Great Britain, compelled to abandon her free trade policy and build a tariff wall to protect her workers from cut-throat competition, will raise the tariff even higher on July 1.

Shiploads of goods are rushed to England to get ahead of the higher tariff. Warehouses are packed with European automobiles, clocks, etc. The United States has been sending in 1,000 motors a day to beat the tariff.

But the British are business men, and cold in business matters. They will probably make the higher tariff retroactive, dating it back far enough to sadden the hearts of European and American manufacturers "dumping" goods in England.

In these days no country paying high wages can live without high tariffs. And no beautiful theories can change that.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS--

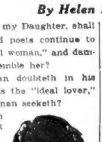
By Helen Rowland

HOW long, oh my Daughter, shall writers and poets continue to sing of the "ideal woman," and damsels seek to resemble her?

For, what man doubteth in his heart that HE is the "ideal lover," whom every woman seeketh?

Yet, who hath found a Perfect Lover?

For, verily, in the winning of a woman, a little discretion exceedeth much pulchritude and a good "line" is better than a Greek profile.



Helen Rowland

Go to. A man with UNDERSTANDING is as a pearl in the oyster or a proposal after thirty—a rare and beautiful surprise!

But an Adonis that hath received all his sentimental education at the "petting party" is as a street car with a flat wheel or a taxicab without springs. He causeth thee only a jolt.

As a tack in the heel of a dancing slipper, as a scientific lecture on a July night, as salt in the coffee, so is a man that seeketh to "improve" thee when thou wishest to be admired and kissed.

But a lover that professeth to adore thee blindly is sweeter than music on the water and more inspiring than a becoming mirror.

As exhilarating as a drug-store drink, as thrilling as last year's almanac, so is a man that talketh "shop" and discusseth his dyspepsia beneath the June moon; and he that is "witty" in a canoe at sunset is as sugar upon clams.

But a man that seeketh to be slushy before the multitude is as one that applaudeth in the middle of the aria. He breaketh the charm.

As a taxicab window that sticketh and will not shut in a rainstorm, as a steel riveter across the street, as a fat man in an aisle seat, so is a "conversationalist" that regardeth thee only as a foil for his own brilliancy.

But he that harkeneth when thou speakest, and applaudeth thy wit, is as firelight upon a diamond. He causeth thee to scintillate.

As welcome as a thunderstorm at a garden party, as a telephone call before breakfast, so is a NOISY man that is full of chatter.

But a discreet lover who is full of silences is as comforting as a thermos bottle upon a sailing trip.

Verily, verily, in a world full of near-overs and imitation sheiks and would-be cavemen, an artistic lover is a rare and beautiful thing, and more refreshing than a cool breeze in a desert!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

As knowledge without justice ought to be called cunning rather than wisdom, so a mind prepared to meet danger, if excited by its own eagerness and not the public good, deserves the name of audacity rather than courage. —Plato.

* * *

That which we are, we shall teach, not voluntarily, but involuntarily. Thoughts come into our minds through avenues which we never left open, and thoughts go out of our minds through avenues which we never voluntarily opened. —Emerson.

* * *

It will often happen when a thing is originally wrong, that amendments do not make it right, but more often do as much mischief in one way, as good in another. —Paine.

* * *

The art of meditation may be exercised at all hours, and in all places; and most of mankind, in their walks at table, and amidst assemblies, turning the eye of the mind inwards, can form an artificial solitude; retired amidst a crowd, calm amidst distraction and wise amidst folly. —Disraeli.

* * *

Never write on a subject without having first read yourself full on it; and never read on a subject till you have thought yourself hungry for it. —Richter.

Do right now. Always scorn appearances, and you always may. The force of character is cumulative. All the foregone days of virtue work their health into this. —Emerson.

Benevolence is a duty. He who frequently practices it and sees his benevolent intentions realized, at length comes really to love him to whom he has done good. —Kant.

A true delineation of the smallest man is capable of interesting the greatest man. —Carlyle.

Boy Is Heartbroken

Helping Hand Editor:

My husband is out of work and we have had a lot of sickness. I expect the stork in July and haven't a thing for the newcomer. My boy, 12, goes to school heartbroken. He is forced to wear an old pair of ladies' shoes. He cannot go to church he looks so shabby and had to give up the cadets as the children laughed at his clothes. Could someone help to make him a little happier? I have four girls 13, 7, 5 and 2, who need clothing and shoes the worst way. My fingers are all picked and torn sewing cardboard on the uppers of their shoes every night so they will have them the next day. For myself I ask nothing, only make it easier for my little ones. MRS. L. M.

Needs the Country

Helping Hand Editor:

I wonder if some of your kind readers have a single house in the country for about $20 or $25 a month. I am a widow with six little children. I must get into the country as my four-year-old boy's blood is turning to water and my little three-year-old boy was hit by an automobile two weeks ago. I do not care how far back it is as long as my children have a place to run and play. MRS. F. B.

Wants Extra Work

Helping Hand Editor:

The small wages I get do not maintain my family and I wonder if through your wonderful column you could get me work from 5 to 9 p. m. and Saturday from 1 o'clock. I will do anything to earn some extra money. MARTIN.

Others in Need

Mrs. A. B.-I, whose husband has just come from the hospital, writes they are badly in need of clothing. She needs house dresses and Summer coat, size 44, and he needs pants, size 38, and shirts.

Mrs. M. P. has boys, thirteen and eight, and baby, two, who are in need of clothing. Husband of no account.

Mrs. G. J.-1 will take a good, clean girl, twelve or thirteen, into the country with her this Summer for company, as her husband will only come there week-ends. Will get the best of food and a good vacation.

Mrs. A., mother of four little children, has one four years of age that is a cripple and cannot walk. She would be so grateful to some kind reader for a stroller. Husband is seriously ill in the hospital.

Mrs. B. S. asks for clothing for herself, size 44, and for husband, size 4; girl, sixteen, who takes size 38; girls, six and three and one-half, and boys, twelve and 8. Have had lots of sickness.

Mrs. M. A. M. has a large smooth-haired dog fond of children which she will gladly give to some reader. Lives in an apartment where there are objections to a dog.

Little Martha, seven years old, writes she is just getting over an illness and needs a tonic, but her father is not working and cannot buy it for her.

Mrs. F. N. B. will board a healthy girl between one and two years of age. Would adopt later if satisfactory.

Mrs. C., mother of a large family, would appreciate some pieces of carpet or couple of art squares. Also baby crib and mattress. Boys, three and five, need suits or overalls and husband needs suit, size 38.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

MAN is the slave of folly, seeking his whole life long after bright gold till his heart grows cold, heedless of joy and song. Toiling through sunbright hours, pent in a dingy room, growing each day farther away still from life's Springtime bloom. Deep in the Stygian coal mines high on the frigid peaks, [illegible] over for gold he seeks. Wiser were joyous ancients back in the dawn of time, men who could laugh at the golden chaff, setting their lives to rhyme. Their's was the stirring fray; back in life's dawn they knew nymph and faun, close to the gods were they! Man is the slave of folly, wearing dull days away; better to go where the sea winds blow [illegible]

TENDENCY OF TAIL TO WAG THE DOG

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THERE is a constant tendency for the tail to try to wag the dog.

That is, there is a tendency for a thing that is but an appanage to think that it is the whole show.

There is the legend of a fly who was on the cowcatcher of an engine and who exclaimed, "Oh, see what a big dust we are making!"

Athletics comprise only a part of a youth's training, and a minor part. The body is always inferior to the mind.

Children are sent to school primarily to train their minds. What a man amounts to in this world usually depends on the quality of his brain.

It is the brain and its development that distinguishes a man from the lower animals.

Yet a constant tendency is to magnify athletics over mental culture. This is a tendency that ought to be restrained.

Athletics are good in their way and for their purpose, but they do not constitute the main thing for which one is sent to a university. There is a university out West of which the coach for athletics gets more money than its president.

Frequently the standing of a college is determined more by the success of its athletes than by its curriculum.

There is a tendency for the tail to wag the dog in the matter of prohibition.

Many people in New York think that prohibition is a failure because of its many transgressions in New York.

In that city there are doubtless a number of "speakeasies" and bootleggers, but it is a mistake to argue from this that such things and persons exist all over the country.

For one to say that the whole matter has failed because it is not quite a success in New York is to claim that the tail wags the dog.

Very frequently the baby in the household makes more trouble than all the rest of the members combined. By crying and otherwise making a nuisance of itself it attracts the most attention. It is really of the least importance. At least it is the least important member of the household.

It is a case of the tail wagging the dog.

MIRACLE OF WATER ON STOVE LID

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Please explain why water, when poured on a hot stove, does not all evaporate instantly, but leaves drops that continue to bounce and roll for a full minute at times. F. H. P. H."

YOU have got into the philosophers' play-ground where, as in the "Interpreter's House" of the "Pilgrim's Progress," strange and curious things are exhibited and explained.

This particular curiosity is called "the spheroidal state," from the shape that the little drops assume as they dance and run about above the red-hot surface of the stove.

You must have the stove lid, or other metal, heated considerably above the boiling point of water, i. e., above 212 degrees Fahrenheit, or 100 degrees Centigrade, or else the little spheres will not form and begin their play.

A temperature of 200 degrees Centigrade is generally recommended in order to have the best results. Make the lid red-hot.

Then, when the water is sprinkled upon it a part instantly evaporates, and before all can follow suit, a film of vapor is formed from the evaporated part and this film lies between the hot metal and the yet unevaporated water, serving as a screen and also as a support for the water drops above.

It keeps the excessive heat from reaching the drops because vapor is a very bad conductor of heat, and at the same time it holds them in suspension, and makes them dart and jump about in consequence of an action that you might never think of.

That layer of heated vapor resembles the screen of bombs that swept like a protecting wall in front of charging columns of infantry in the great war.

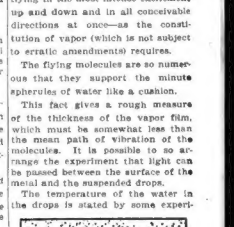
The enemy could not penetrate, or live, in that dreadful belt of falling bombs, and just so the little spheres of water cannot pass through the zone of hot vapor.

The likeness to the bomb screen is much closer than you may imagine, for the vapor that keeps the water drops suspended does so by means of a real bombardment—the bombs consisting of molecules of water vapor, flying in the most intense excitement up and down and in all conceivable directions at once—as the constitution of vapor (which is not subject to erratic amendments) requires.

The flying molecules are so numerous that they support the minute spherules of water like a cushion.

This fact gives a rough measure of the thickness of the vapor film, which must be somewhat less than the mean path of vibration of the molecules. It is possible to so arrange the experiment that light can be passed between the surface of the metal and the suspended drops.

The temperature of the water in the drops is stated by some experimenters as about 95 deg. C., or five degrees below the boiling point.



The drops do not last more than a few minutes, gradually becoming smaller as they evaporate, and not only does this gradual evaporation maintain the vapor screen, but it also acts to keep the remainder of the drops from turning to steam by drawing heat from them—heat being always absorbed in the process of evaporation.

So there is a very beautiful compensatory machinery of Nature's own invention, operating with exquisite exactness during this curious performance of water when dropped on a red hot stove.

If the temperature of the stove lid sallowed to fall to near the boiling point the suspended spheres descend until they touch the metal, whereupon they explode into steam.

The spheroidal state explains the ancient "miracle" of walking on red-hot ploughshares.

ONCE-OVERS

WHEN YOU CULTIVATE WORTHWHILE FRIENDS AND READ ARTICLES THAT BROADEN YOUR MIND YOU ARE COURTING SUCCESS.

If you were told that you must confine your whole life and all of its activities to one particular locality you would rebel.

You would think it a most unfair arrangement.

Doubtless, you would try by some means to break over and branch out and enlarge your sphere of usefulness and amusement.

At any rate you would be most unhappy.

Yet that is just what is happening to you when you choose to read books and papers and magazines which do not enlarge your mind.

To be interested merely in the personals and the locals of a newspaper; to read only stories of persons of your own age and inclinations; to study only that which pertains to the daily necessities of living is narrow.

To choose for friends only those who know as little as you do will not bring improvement.

Do not be satisfied with surface friends, nor surface study, nor surface improvement. Go after worthwhile association and information—it pays.
